Bevin Warns West Would Fight to Keep Liberty Alive

'We Must Face Conflict If It Is Forced Upon Us,' He Tells Commons

Notice Served on Reds

London, June 19 (AP).—British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin obliquely served notice on Russia tonight that the western world never has and never will stand for suppression of liberty.

"If there is to be a conflict between ideologies I shall regret it, but if it is forced upon us we must face it," Bevin told Commons. Then he added:

"I don't believe the western world, in the long run, will be the sufferers, if there is a conflict, because I am convinced, although you cannot organize it—you cannot sit down in committee and discuss tactics—but I have seen so many conflicts and so many dictators who have failed."

Eden Accuses Russia

Anthony Eden, a Conservative Party spokesman, accused Russia of "flagrant" interference with the right of eastern European nations to govern themselves.

Eden then asked dramatically:

"Where is the next move to be? Will it be Finland, hitherto comparatively free but where already there are rumors of threats against the right wing Agrarians and, to a lesser degree, against the Social Democrats?"

Bevin said he was convinced that a determined move was on foot to make Hungary and Bulgaria one-party states. He put all the blame for trouble in strife-torn Greece on the Communists, declaring:

"In Greece the lifting of a finger could stop the civil war. The Communists have carried on a policy there to disrupt that poor little country, which, I think, is a tragedy."

Bevin also made it plain that he would tolerate no arguments, such as held up the Moscow Foreign Ministers Conference, in launching U. S. Secretary of State Marshall's aid-for-Europe program.

Puts Emphasis on Speed

"The guiding principle I shall follow in any talks I have on this matter will be speed," he said. "I spent six weeks in Moscow trying to get a settlement. I shall not be a party to holding up the economic recovery of Europe by the mess of procedure, terms of reference or all the paraphernalia which may go with it."

Bevin, just back from his conferences in Paris with the French on the American proposals, told the lawmakers Russia had been invited to participate in three-

Soviet Envoy Voices Hope Of Cooperation

Conciliatory Tone Marks Novikov's Address in Chicago

Chicago, June 19 (U.P.).—Soviet Ambassador Nikolai V. Novikov today deplored "poisonous rumors" of another war and said it is "possible and desirable" that the Soviet Union and the United States embark on a policy of cooperation in world affairs.

In one of his rare public appearances, he told the Chicago Council of American-Soviet Friendship that the present international situation shows "that peace may be considered secured for a long time despite the attempts of aggressive elements to provoke war."

He said the Russian people want to work with the United States, and "there is no doubt that such cooperation is also in the interest of the American people."

Novikov's prepared remarks contained some of the most conciliatory statements on Soviet-American relations recently voiced by the Russians.

Recalling that Russia and the United States worked together during World War II, the Soviet envoy said "there is no ground whatsoever for saying that they cannot also cooperate during peace."

In another apparently conciliatory gesture, Novikov made one of the few Soviet acknowledgements that Russia received what he termed "moral and material support from the American people and their government" during World War II. He said:

"The peoples of the Soviet Union will always remember this assistance with gratitude as a substantial contribution of the United States of America to the common cause of the Allies."

He added, however, that it was the Soviet Union and its armies which played an "outstanding role" during the first three years of war against Germany. The Soviets, he said, fought 240 Axis divisions on the Eastern front, while only 15 were engaged with the Allies in North Africa.

End of School Overcrowding Urged on Hill

D. C. Citizens Appeal; Rep. Horan Renews Plea For City Sales Tax

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Washington citizens went to the Capitol yesterday to appeal for an end of overcrowding and double shift classes in the District schools.

More than 100 persons crowded the House Appropriations Committee room to take part in open hearings on the District's 1948 budget.

School problems took first place through most of the five-and-a-half-hour session.

Renews Plea for Sales Tax

As it started House District Appropriations Chairman Walt Horan (R., Wash.) told the group, "Your budget is going to be more than 100 million dollars unless I'm mistaken about the attitude of this committee."

He said the 14-million-dollar city revenue bill awaiting Senate action would be inadequate and renewed his plea for a sales tax for Washington. The House voted down the sales tax when Horan sought to write it into the revenue bill.

Under Horan's questioning, several witnesses indorsed the sales tax during the hearing, and others opposed it.

Calls for Lobbying

"If you feel as I do about the sales tax, you'll help over on the Senate side," Horan remarked. "I'm doing a little lobbying, myself."

At Horan's invitation A. W. Heinmiller, in charge of the schools' business administration, told the group $7,148,156 would have to be added to the $2,123,000 school improvement money already in the budget for a program to end part-time classes in 23 schools and avoid them in six others. That would still leave need for spending $13,198,583 after the next fiscal

U. S. Plane Sets Record Of 624 MPH

Army Jet Fighter Recaptures Speed Mark for America After 24 Years

Muroc, Calif., June 19 (AP).—Flashing over a short course at speeds sometimes above 632 miles an hour, a Lockheed jet P-80-R today set a new world's record of 623.8 miles per hour.

The record-shattering flight, watched by only a handful of observers, was made at the Army's base on the edge of the Mojave Desert. Preparations for it have been under way for months.

The plane, designed the P-80-R, a slightly revised version of the standard jet-propelled craft, was piloted by Col. Albert Boyd, Asheville, N. C., chief of the fleet test division of the Air Materiel Command Headquarters at Wright Field, Ohio.

British Record Broken

The plane, which traversed a 1.86-mile course four times—twice in each direction—broke the 616-mile an hour record set September 7, 1946, by a British Gloster-Meteor.

Lockheed said it was the first time in 24 years that the U. S. has held the record. In Washington, however, the Army said the record would not go into the books until officially certified by the Federation Aeronautique Internationale in Paris.

Lockheed said the craft made its run about 50 feet above the flat, hard stretch of Rogers dry lake at speeds of 617.1, 614.7, 632.5 and 630.5 miles per hour. A 10-mile-per hour wind was blowing and ground temperature was 87 degrees.

The last time an American pilot held the speed record, Lockheed said, was in 1923, when Lieut. Al Williams flew a Curtiss racer at 267 miles an hour.

The P-80-R is powered with a new Allison 400 turbo-jet engine.

The Gloster which held the mark was powered by two Rolls Royce Derwent turbo-jets.

The Army last December flew the Bell XS-1 at 550 miles per hour. It is a craft designed ultimately to get into the supersonic speed ranges of 1700 miles an hour.

Simultaneously with today's record flight, Charles H. (Slick) Goodwin, Pennsylvanian who has been preparing for a record assault in the XS-1 over the same field, announced he was quitting as test pilot after a disagreement with Bell Aircraft Co., the craft's manufacturers.

Announcement of the speed attained by the AAF plane was made here by C. S. S. Logsdon of Washington, D. C., secretary of the control board of the National Aeronautic Association, representative in the United States of the Federation Aeronautique Internationale.

He said the official report of the flight has been sent to the National Aeronautic Association at Washington for review and that it will then be forwarded to the federation in Paris for final homologation and international recognition.

The Army said Colonel Boyd took off at 8:00½ a. m. (PST) and landed 21½ minutes later. Determining the official speed of the record flight required nearly seven hours. The Army said approximately 1600 feet of film from two secrometer cameras was developed in the Muroc photography laboratory and analyzed immediately after the flight.

Ship Tieup Ends on All Three Coasts

Atlantic and Gulf Unions Get 5% Pay Rise; Pacific Units Agree to Sail

New York, June 19 (U.P.).—The Nation-wide shipping tieup ended in all ports today as members of three CIO unions voted acceptance of a 5 per cent wage increase on the Atlantic and Gulf coasts and two West Coast unions agreed to sail pending negotiations.

A railroad embargo on freight shipments to strike-bound American vessels was lifted a few hours after the first break in the "no contract, no work" stoppage came with the East Coast settlement.

East Coast unions and ship operators reached their agreement early today after more than 16 continuous hours of negotiations. The West Coast break came 10 hours later, releasing 700 ships from a four-day sit-down stoppage by 200,000 seamen.

N. Y. Locals Ratify Accord

New York locals of the three unions directly involved—the National Maritime Union, American Communications Association and Marine Engineers, ratified the agreement this afternoon. Locals in other ports were expected to announce ratification before tomorrow.

The 50 East and Gulf Coast shipping companies affected also were expected to ratify the settlement swiftly.

[The Associated Press quoted Ferdinand Smith, NMU secretary, as saying early last night that of 15 NMU branches reporting, 14 had ratified the contract, with Charleston, S. C., rejecting it.—Editor's note.]

The East Coast settlement releases several hundred cargo and passenger vessels of the American fleet which had been idled in ports while crews stayed aboard but refused to sail.

The luxury liner America, queen of the American fleet, will leave the harbor at 4 p. m. tomorrow, two days late, the U. S. Lines announced.

Spokesmen for the operators said it was unlikely that any ship affected by the tieup would leave port tonight.

Government-Proposed Accord

The Government-proposed settlement was accepted at 2:40 a. m. (EDT) after two days and nights of conferences in which Assistant Secretary of Labor John W. Gibson took part.

The settlement provides for overtime pay for nine holidays annually to the three unions and extension of previous contract terms for one year with the right to a wage review on December 15.

The NMU, largest of five CIO maritime unions with 70,000 members, had asked a 20 per cent wage increase, reduction of the 48-hour week to 40 hours, six-week paid vacations and hiring of all ratings through union halls.

The American Communications Association, which asked a 15 per cent wage increase, was one of two unions involved in the West Coast dispute where it was bargaining with a separate group of employers. The Marine Cooks and Stewards Union on the West Coast was seeking extension of its canceled contract.

Veto Predicted Today With Strong Truman Attack on Labor Bill

Little Hope Seen in Congress

ADA Members Told to Work Through State Legislatures

Politically liberal-minded Americans were advised here last night to start work on their State Legislatures "because there isn't much you can do with this present Congress."

Mayor Hubert H. Humphrey, Minneapolis, Minn., told a meeting of the Washington Chapter, Americans for Democratic Action, that today's reactionary political leaders were "nurtured, nourished, finished-off and machine-tooled in your own back yards, back in 1938."

The "avalanche of reaction," he said, was started in a "slow methodical way" and was fed on "canned copy of the National Association of Manufacturers" beginning with such things as the "anti-closed shop, and retrogressive legislation."

Here in Washington to testify yesterday before a Senate subcommittee on a Minneapolis organization for fair employment practices, he was preempted as vice chairman of ADA to address the local chapter.

Today's challenge to American progressives, he said, is to give the voters a better choice than "just between the Communist party line and traditional party machine politics." The Democratic party, Mayor Humphrey declared, offers more hope for liberals.

"The postwar program of the Republicans," said the speaker, "is post-Spanish American War, not this past war. They're still talking about a full dinner-pail."

Exhorting ADA members to take active part in their home community politics, Mayor Humphrey derided "parlor politicians" and "those who think they can win political battles speaking over a glass of beer in a Bohemian atmosphere."

Humphrey, a Democrat, was elected mayor of Minneapolis two years ago, at the age of 34, and reelected two weeks ago with an overwhelming majority.

Congress Leaders Tell All Members To Be on Hand; Senate May Delay

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Congress today awaits President Truman's decision on the Taft-Hartley labor bill. The message will probably be sent to Capitol Hill by noon.

High Government officials on whom the President has leaned for labor advice were certain yesterday that he will veto the controversial measure. They also expected that his message would be a sizzling blast against the bill's general intent as well as its specific technical provisions.

Radio Talk Rumored

A rumor circulated here last night that President Truman would make a radio address to the Nation on the bill in the course of the weekend. The White House declined to confirm or deny the report. Assistant Press Secretary Eben Ayers said only that "we have nothing on that yet."

Congressional leaders of both parties, also anticipating a veto, have issued orders for all members to be on hand.

If Mr. Truman turns thumbs down on the bill, the House, as the chamber which originated the measure, will have first chance to vote. The roll-call ballot will be taken immediately after the reading of the message, probably without any debate. That the House will override the veto by more than the required two-thirds vote is virtually certain.

May Delay in Senate

Senate Democrats, after first negotiating for a postponemnt of the vote until next Thursday, decided at a strategy conference late yesterday to go ahead with a vote Saturday afternoon, if the Republican leadership would agree.

It was pointed out that Majority Whip Wherry had already suggested holding the Senate in session tonight and if necessary through Saturday in an effort to pass the bill before a weekend adjournment.

Democratic leadership, which previously had sent out calls for all absentees to return, figured they would have a near-maximum attendance by tomorrow. If the Saturday vote plan fails the Democratic leaders are expected to reopen negotiations for a vote next Thursday. Several of their key men will be absent the first two or three days of next week.

Inasmuch as the Republican leadership will be in control of the bill a definite decision on a voting hour may be reached at a regular meeting of the majority Policy Committee at 10 a. m. today.

The evidence suggesting that the President will veto the bill and

Senate Passes Wool Tariff Bill 48 to 38

Pleas of Marshall, Clayton, Stimson And Hull Are Ignored

By John W. Ball

(Roll Call on Page 13)

By a vote of 48 to 38 the Senate yesterday overrode objections of the State Department and passed the highly controversial bill permitting higher tariffs and import restrictions on wool.

The legislation, a conference agreement, now goes to the White House. Several opposition speakers urged a presidential veto during the limited debate on the measure.

By its action, Congress ignored appeals from Secretary of State Marshall and his Undersecretary William L. Clayton, supported by letters from former Secretaries of State Cordell Hull and Henry L. Stimson.

All argued that passage might have a disastrous effect upon the International Trade Conference at Geneva, where this country is attempting to work out agreements for lower tariffs with other nations.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Mich.), Republican Foreign Relations chairman, voted against the bill. Senator Tom Connally (Texas), ranking minority Foreign Relations Committee member, but representing a wool-growing State, voted for the measure.

Passage of the measure might be a blow to America's policy of aid to smaller nations opposing the spread of communism, Senator Francis J. Myers (D., Pa.) told the Senate.

"If we retreat," he declared, "and this bill is the first step of a retreat, the nations of the world may well be driven into the all-embracing arms of communism.

"If we back out of Europe tail first, and this bill is a first step in backing out, God help those throughout the world who look to us for aid.

"And, if they go down, I say, God help America."

Senate Sends Rent Measure To Truman

Bill Extends Controls To March, Opens Door For 15 Per Cent Boost

After a brief and spiritless debate, the Senate yesterday passed by a voice vote legislation to extend rent controls until next March.

The bill, a conference agreement, now goes to the White House. Both opponents and supporters stated that if the bill is vetoed, rent controls will die entirely June 30.

The new measure permits a 15 per cent rent increase when landlords and tenants agree on a lease extending through 1948. No other general increase is provided.

Other provisions would:

1. Put administration of rent controls under the Office of Housing Expediter. In this the measure conflicts with an appropriation bill recently passed by the House which would end that agency June 30.

2. Set up boards in each of 600 defense rental areas. These boards would have power to recommend rent increases or removal of controls. The rent administrator would have 30 days to approve such action.

3. Remove all controls on new housing, hotels, newly rented dwellings and remodeled homes.

4. Make evictions subject to State laws.

5. Remove all controls over construction except recreational or amusement buildings.

The Senate devoted less than two hours to consideration of the measure. While it was acting, the Senate Banking Committee was considering President Truman's Reorganization Plan 3, which would combine all Federal Housing agencies. Unless the Senate turns down the plan, it becomes law June 30.

One witness, Clark Daniel, representing the National Home and Property Owners' Foundation, testified in opposition to the plan.

The housing situation, Daniels said, "is nowhere near as acute as the public is led to believe." He said the National Housing Agency "in an overzealous effort to prove its existence necessary" had issued "inaccurate information on the housing situation."

4th Disaster in 22 Days

15 of 36 Aboard Die in Crash Of American Plane in Syria

New York, June 19 (AP).—A Pan American World Airways Constellation, with one engine afire, crashed in darkness today in desolate Syrian country along the banks of the Euphrates River, killing 15 of the 36 persons aboard.

Shohan

It was the fourth major disaster to overtake a United States commercial air carrier in the last 22 days. The four smashups have taken 161 lives.

[International News Service said fatalities rose to 18 today with the deaths of three passengers who had been gravely injured.]

The 15 dead included seven crew members, all Americans, and eight passengers, none of them United States citizens.

Three American crew members and 18 passengers survived.

A passenger list compiled by Pan American revealed that only one American was aboard the plane other than the crew. He was Charles Shohan, a State Department official, whose address was listed as 2417 Good Hope rd. se., Washington, D. C.

(A dispatch from Damascus, Syria, said 16 of the passengers, all of them Indian and British, were injured. Three escaped unharmed. The 15 dead were buried near the scene and the injured were transported by Syrian Airways to the American University's Hospital at Beirut.)

[Dr. Charles J. Shohan, 38, is adviser in foodstuff allocations for the United Nations. The State Department announced it had received a cable from Pan American saying merely that Dr. Shohan was "okay."

[Dr. Shohan, the department said, was returning from an international rice study group meeting sponsored by the food and agriculture organization of the U. N., at Trivandrun, India. He serves with the division as an adviser on international resources. A member of the State Department for nearly two years, he is married and has two young children.—Editor's note.]

The line had only meager details of the crash, which occurred at 2 a. m. Syrian time (7 p. m. EST yesterday). It reported the plane had messaged that its No. 2 engine was afire.

The plane was en route from Karachi, India, to Istabul, Turkey, with New York as its eventual destination.

Crew members who died in the Syrian crash were listed by Pan American as:

Pioneer Educator and Sister Are Slain in Colorado Cabin

Pinecliffe, Colo., June 19 (AP).—Emily Griffith, 68, nationally known pioneer in adult education, and her sister, Florence Griffith, 67, were found shot to death in their mountain home today and a neighbor and friend was sought for questioning.

Undersheriff Donald Moore said Fred Lundy, 65, was missing from his cabin and his car had been found with a note in it indicating he may have killed himself. Lundy was described as a former teacher in Denver's Emily Griffith Opportunity School which the slain woman founded.

Moore said Lundy was a close friend. His automobile was found in nearby Coal Creek canyon. In it were a brief case containing $350, various personal papers and a note which Moore quoted:

"If and when I die, please ship my body to Roscoe, Ill. No autopsy. Correspond with Roy Cummings, Roscoe, a cousin. No funeral here. Money in this brief case can be used for immediate expense. Thank you. P. S. Embalm in Boulder, Colo."

The time of the shooting was placed at about 4 p. m. Wednesday. A meal had been prepared but not eaten. The table was set for three.

The position of the bodies indicated Florence Griffith was shot first, and Emily was shot as she fled. Both women were shot in the back of the head with a .38. Officers said they had learned Lundy possessed a .38 caliber weapon.

The Denver educator had lived in the cabin with her sister since her retirement in 1934 after more than a quarter-century in the field of education.

Born in Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1880, Emily became a teacher in a Denver elementary school in 1898. She became interested in helping those whose economic circumstances had forced them to forego formal educations.

Then began her long campaign which ended in the Emily Griffith Opportunity School, open to anyone without fee, and with classes conducted day and night.

Worried Parents Beg Congress To Continue Day Care Centers

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Thirty worried mothers, and a half dozen equally worried fathers, took a half day off from their work yesterday to urge Congress to continue child day care centers in the District.

The District Commissioners and the Board of Public Welfare opposed the move.

"We're broke and need any money we can get for projects with higher priority," asserted Commissioner Guy Mason, explaining he "personally" favored continuation.

"We're desperate and need the centers to care for our children while we work to earn a livelihood and bring up the children with self-respect," cried out the parents who testified.

The House District Subcommittee, headed by Representative A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.), holding hearings on a Senate-approved bill to provide $150,000 for continuing the care centers for another year, listened to the testimony of the parents with obvious sympathy.

The District's 12 day care centers, annually handling around 400 children from 2 to 10 years old, were established in 1942 primarily as a war measure, to permit mothers to participate in the war effort by taking a full-time job. Funds for operating the centers ran out June 30.

"I don't know how I'll get along without the (D street) Center," testified Mrs. Verone Moreno of 2722 Terrace rd. se., a frail divorcee who works for Agriculture Department.

"Lately, I've been having horrible dreams that the center will be forced to close, and I'll be forced to place my John in an institution or a foster home.

Eisenhower Asked To Head Columbia

To Labor Dept.

Senate Unit Backs USES Transfer

By The Associated Press

Over objections by Chairman Taft (R., Ohio) the Senate Labor Committee yesterday recommended Senate approval of President Truman's plan for shifting the United States Employment Service permanently to the Labor Department.

Taft told reporters the vote was 6 to 5.

A Senate Labor Subcommittee on Wedneseday approved the transfer program, known as Reorganization Plan No. 2, by a vote of 3 to 2.

The program will go into effect automatically July 1 unless the Senate disapproves. The House has rejected the plan.

The Employment Service is in the Labor Department at present, but only on a temporary basis under an executive order. If the Senate rejects the reorganization formula, the service will revert to the Federal Security Agency when the President's wartime powers expire.

The program also would give the Secretary of Labor direct supervision of the Wage-Hour Administration.

Veto Message Is Predicted

make a fight to have his decision upheld:

1. Requests have gone out from the White House to a large number of Federal labor experts to submit draft material, showing technical and philosophical objections to the bill in vigorous terms.

2. The summoning back from Geneva, Switzerland, of Senator Thomas (D., Utah). Next to Senator Wagner (D., N. Y.), Thomas is the most venerable labor champion in the Senate, and was for many years chairman of the Senate Labor Committee. He is to fly back to Washington from an International Labor Organization conference.

Close Vote Conceded

All sides concede that a Senate vote to override a veto will be very close. The bill passed the Senate by seven votes—announced or actually cast—more than is necessary to override.

Two Senators, Lucas (D., Ill.) and Sparkman (D., Ala.), who voted for the bill in the Senate are known to be ready to support a veto. Senator Aiken (R., Vt.) has intimated that he would be impressed by a strong veto message. Senator Tobey (R., N. H.) will probably follow Aiken's decision.

Meantime pressure is being put on Democratic Senators Russell (Ga.), George (Ga.), Maybank (S. C.), Fulbright (Ark.), O'Conor (Md.), Connally (Tex.), Umstead (N. C.), Hatch (N. Mex.) and McKellar (Tenn.).

Yesterday President Truman abruptly silenced a suggestion made to him by Southern Democratic figures that he permit the the bill to become law. A delegation of National Democratic Committeemen from six Southern States had called on him. One of their number, Col. Marion Rushton of Alabama, raised the question and asked Mr. Truman to approve the legislation.

According to a member of the party, the President cut this line of discussion short. He was said to have remarked that he had not listened to arguments either from labor or from industry and did not propose to hear any from Democrats. He said he would make his own decision on the basis of an analysis of the bill.

Henderson Speaks

Meantime, outside the White House, the pro and con arguments continued. Over Station WINX, Leon Henderson, chairman of the executive committee of Americans for Democratic Action, last night made a reply to a speech given the night before by Donald Richberg.

Henderson discussed a series of provisions in the bill which he said would weaken labor and tie it down "so that it cannot be fully free in its negotiations for wages and working conditions." The penalties of the "national emergency" strike prevention section run entirely against labor, he argued. They would not be effective, however, in stopping a strong union, and would only unfairly damage a weaker union, he stated.

Provisions on the prohibition of boycotts upset a line of Supreme Court decisions going back 30 years, Henderson said. He complained of a "one-sided denial of free political activity." He denounced the necessity of a two-year period of elections among 75 per cent of the Nation's unionized employes merely to obtain the union shop, something they already have.

General Won't Accept University Post 'This Year'

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower has received an informal offer to become president of Columbia University but will remain as Army Chief of Staff at least through this year.

This was disclosed yesterday by the War Department after publication of reports that he had resigned to accept the Columbia post.

A statement issued by the department declared that when he did retire, Eisenhower "would like to utilize his energies in something connected with public service of a nonpolitical nature."

Rumors have long been current in Army circles that "Ike" was considering retirement. His four-year term as Chief of Staff, however, runs until November, 1949.

Well-informed persons say that the date Eisenhower steps down will depend to a large extent upon when Gen. Omar Bradley, Veteran Administrator, feels he can turn over this present pob to another. Bradley is understood to be President Truman's first choice as next Chief of Staff.

Yesterday's statement—issued by Maj. Gen. Floyd Parks, Army public information chief—left the door open for "Ike" 'to accept the Columbia post early next year.

Parks said that Eisenhower had directed him to say that he "has no intention of leaving his present assignment as Chief of Staff during the current year and never without the full approval of the Secretary of War and the President."

Railroad Rate Bill Weighed By House Group

By The Associated Press

The House Commerce Committee will take up today the Senate-approved bill to exempt railroads' cooperative rate-making activities from the antitrust laws.

A similar measure by Representative Bulwinkle (D., N. C.) was approved by the House last year, but died without action in the Senate because of the threat of a filibuster by its opponents, most of whom are from the South.

One of the measure's principal opponents, Senator Russell (D., Ga.), has said he expects Mr. Truman to veto the bill. Minority Leader Barkley (D., Ky.) told his colleagues shortly before the final vote: "I express here the fervent hope that the President will veto it."

Meeting Tonight

Tentative Dairy Wage Pact Reached

A tentative agreement was reported yesterday in the contract dispute between the metropolitan area milk industry and its workers.

It will be submitted to members of the Milk Drivers and Dairy Employes Union, Local 246 (AFL), tonight at 8 in Turner's Arena for ratification.

Neither union nor management spokesmen would divulge contents of the proposal. However, Conciliation Commissioner James O'Byrne reported "everything looks very happy."

Workers originally sought six days' pay for five days' work, but the management consistently snubbed demands for reduction in the work week.

Union negotiators said they had not yet decided whether to recommend acceptance of the companies' latest contract offer. A 15-day "truce" period voted by workers expires tomorrow.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for Capital Transit Co. workers announced that both the union and management have agreed to submit their contract dispute to arbitration. The management declined to comment.

W. E. Simms, president of Local 689, Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes (AFL), said the agreement was reached in accordance with the present contract.

He said each side will select an arbitrator, and the two designated will name a third to represent the public. The current contract expires June 30.

Principal union demand is for six days' pay for five days' work, it was said.

year to complete the program, he said.

Budget Officer Walter Fowler presented a report showing that a $98,714,160 budget program now faces the subcommittee.

The figure did not include the additional school building money, but did include money for increasing teachers' pay, and for continuing day-care centers. Both programs have yet to clear through Congress.

Fowler's total also showed a $3,111,489 deficit in the water fund, which he said meant only that construction plans for the water system would be deferred to the extent of the deficit.

Civic witnesses protested school inadequacies in all sections of the city.

Witnesses on school needs included:

Malcolm T. Daniels, Midway Civic Association; Edward L. Merzereau, North Randle Community Citizens Association; Col. Archie Edward, Kimball PTA; William J. Smith and Hayden S. Garber, representing citizens groups concerned with the Anne Beers School; the Rev. James L. Pinn, of Goodwill Baptist Church, and Woolsey W. Hall, both speaking for the Federation of Civic Associations, and Mrs. M. Elizabeth Carpenter, president of the Federation of P-TA's.

Effects of double-shift schooling at Randall Junior High were protested by the Rev. Thomas C. Garnett, of Zion Baptist Church, two students, Evelyn Barber, 14, and David Gorham, 14, and Leon S. Calhoun, president of the Southwest Civic Association.

Others who testified were Charles J. Quander, Joint Citizens Conference; James B. Walker, Dunbar High School Alumni Association; Robert F. Brooks, Logan P-TA; Mrs. Anna C. Snipe, and Mrs. Lula Shelton, both testifying about the Garfield Turner School; Mrs. Joy P. Davis, Capitol View Association, and George R. Jordan, Far Northeast Council of Civic Associations.

Milton A. Lightfoot, speaking for civic and business groups, protested plans to locate a new Cardozo School at 14th and S sts. nw. He said he also was against a reported plan to put a shooting gallery in the new school.

Other witnesses included: Mrs. Florence E. Welch, urging more teachers for shut-in children; Mrs. Arliss A. Davis, urging the $20,000 budget item for a River Terrace elementary school site, and Mrs. Charles H. Hagerty, who testified for the Southeast Council of Citizens Associations.

2-Year RFC Extension Is Approved

The House Banking Committee tentatively approved yesterday a two-year extension of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The committee moved to curtail RFC operations sharply and remove the agency from competition with private lending institutions. It voted to limit the RFC to two billion dollars in new business and to erase the agency's authority to make real estate loans.

The Senate Banking Committee also has agreed tentatively to approve legislation extending the RFC one year beyond June 30, the date its authority expires under present law. A formal vote on the legislation is scheduled for today.

The Senate group also decided to seek $50,000 for what Senator Buck (R., Del.) called "a complete investigation" of the agency to be completed by next March 1.

Chairman Wolcott (R., Mich.) said when the House committee finally completes the bill it will stipulate that RFC shall not be on a competitive basis with private institutions, requiring RFC interest rates to conform with going interest rates of the locality where it does business.

Also stricken by the House group is RFC's power to provide for original mortgages a market for home loans guaranteed under the Servicemen's Readjustment Act.

This, Wolcott said, is to head off the possibility of a "colossal racket" by middlemen handling this paper. He told reporters there is no need for the RFC operation since private concerns can handle these loans.

'Veto Caravan' Delegates Get Cool Reception at Capitol

Capitol Hill turned an icy shoulder yesterday on labor's "veto caravan."

More than 1000 union members, assembled in Washington for a last-ditch demonstration against the Taft-Hartley labor bill, heard the news at a Turner's Arena rally.

One by one, leaders of delegations who had visited the Hill earlier to urge their Congressmen to sustain a veto—should President Truman issue one—reported their lobbying was not very successful.

"Most of our representatives refused to see us," Mark Robinson, a member of the United Furniture Workers of America (CIO) and head of the Southern California delegation, told the workers.

Expressing dissatisfaction with the reception accorded by Senator Irving M. Ives (R., N. Y.), a spokesman for the New York City delegation declared:

"So far as we're concerned, he's a dead duck. We're going to make certain that next time there's a senatorial election we don't make the same mistake."

Seymour Alberts of Long Island, N. Y., a member of the United Electrical Workers (CIO) and head of a delegation ordered to contact Navy Secretary James Forrestal, reported "we spoke to one of his secretaries and the answer was strictly noncommittal."

Larry Schnall, business agent of Building Service Employes Local 144 (AFL) in New York City, presenting an account of his visit to the Hill, dubbed the "majority of Congressmen" as "representatives of the National Association of Manufacturers" and "enemies" of the working man.

Earlier, cars and buses loaded with union members from 14 States rolled through the city, bearing placards, banners and hand-painted signs demanding: "Keep Our U. S. Free" . . . "Veto Slave Labor Bill" . . . "Veto and Make It Stick."

Defense Rests in May Trial

The defense rested yesterday in the May-Garsson war contract bribery case.

The step was taken after his battery of attorneys declined to put Murray Garsson on the witness stand in the District Court. His brother, Henry, and their co-defendant, former Representative Andrew J. May, both have testified their interests in the 70 million dollar Garsson munitions empire were patriotic and in no way dishonest.

May is accused of using his office of chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee to aid the Garssons get war contracts.

Justice Henry A. Schweinhaut said that on Monday he may accompany attorneys to the bedside of ailing Joseph F. Freeman, Washington representative of the Garssons. Freeman was stricken with a heart attack while on the witness stand Tuesday.

All that remains in the trial is rebuttal, the Freeman evidence, and final argument. It was indicated the trial, which began April 22, will reach the jury next week.

such berths are available, but two are used by the army, for shipments to civil war zones.)

Larger boats can lie alongside these repaired quays. One of these ships is the Wolverine Star, of 11,000 tons, a C-2 ship with higher speed than the Liberty or Victory types. Aboard vessels we spy an American-built locomotive—others already are unloaded on the quayside.

The heat is intense. The mate of the launch asks for a cigarette. In the glaring sunshine we discover long stretches of shoreline with lumber and timber on it. The timber is Douglas fir, brought to Greece to repair and construct fishing craft. There are about five million board feet of this timber on the bank.

"Most of it is intended for construction in the north, but we cannot transport it because of the civil war," says my guide.

As we slide along, we notice the picturesque caiques, the ships of the Levant. They have queerly bent noses and bows, with equally quaintly placed sails. Goods brought in by an American ship are being transshipped in them to their island destinations.

Along the quayside, in the scanty shadow of ruined warehouses, crawls a queer German crane, queer as the Germans. Two strange-looking ships, painted in navy camouflage colors, are former German ferryboats. Despite the gun turrets placed on their decks by the Jerries, I recognize the former Warnemuende-Gjesder ferryboats, once used to carry railroad cars between the Danish Isles and Germany. One is now owned by the Greek navy. The other is on loan, bringing locomotives into Greece. As we go along we notice that one of the blasted harbor cranes, near warehouse No. 5, has now been reconstructed.

The hugh silos in the harbor were all blown up. Only one silo still operates in the distant St. George Bay, handling about 1000 tons of grain daily—a remarkable achievement, indeed.

We pass the Greek ship Athanas II. Greedy shipowners overloaded it with timber, and the ship is now listing almost 45 degrees. It is expected to capsize, unless skillful operations can salvage the top layers of timber and bring the ship back to position.

The coal ships fly Greek, American, English and Panamanian flags. Many Greek ships recently acquired are flying the flag of this Central American country. The coal brought into Piraeus must be handled by hand. Sweating stevedores unload it in baskets into barges; from there it is taken to the quayside where the coal is pushed in wheelbarrows into freight cars—a costly, circumstantial procedure, but what else is there to do? It will take many years before Piraeus will look anything like her old self.

Many people, among them business-minded Americans, believe Piraeus could be modernized into the most important harbor of the Mediterranean, now that Trieste's value has become doubtful. It is believed that if American enterprise would deem it advisable to invest here, the investment would repay itself on a self-liquidating basis.

The launch makes a sharp turn and coasts along the ruined eastern quays. Here the rubble is increased by the broken bodies of ships and wreckages of all kinds of seagoing craft. In 1944 the harbor was full of wreckage. British army and navy engineers cleaned it out as much as possible; the rest was dragged to this eastern side, where skeletons of warships, steamers, tugs and fishing boats rust in the hot sun of the Aegean shore.

Police School Planned

A four-week police training school will begin July 7 for all members of the Montgomery County Police Department, Chief Charles M. Orme said yesterday.

The course will be conducted under supervision of Capt. James S. McCauliffe and a special agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. It will include courses in law and police procedure.

Another Hungarian Assails Communists in Parliament

Budapest, Hungary, June 19 (AP). The vice president of the anti-Communist Freedom Party, shouting above the din of an uproarious session of Parliament, declared today that Ferenc Nagy was forced out as Premier because he opposed measures which "would end private enterprise in Hungary."

Vince Nagy, Freedom vice president, declared that if "customary procedure" had been followed, Lajos Dinnyes, pro-Communist member of the Smallholders Party, never would have been chosen as Hungary's new Premier. Vince Nagy is not related to Ferenc Nagy.

Following the lead of Freedom Party President Dezso Sulyok, who spoke out defiantly last week in condemning the recent Communist-inspired coup d'etat, Vince Nagy told Parliament:

"The letter of the constitution may have been followed in the election of Dinnyes as Premier, but certainly not its essence. Had the choice of a successor to Ferenc Nagy been submitted to the Smallholders Party as a whole, which would have been customary procedure, Dinnyes never would have been the man chosen."

Communist Charge Mocked

Amid angry roars from the Communist benches, Vince Nagy defied Smallholder deputies to deny that they had been asked by their party's executive committee to name Dinnyes as Premier.

"Go on," he shouted. "Deny it."

No one did. Then the Freedom Party vice president said in tones of mock gravity:

"Dinnyes' election was a sort of posthumous acquiescence on the part of the Smallholders Party."

Concerning Communist charges that Ferenc Nagy, Centrist Smallholder, conspired to overthrow the government, Vince Nagy told Parliament:

"It is unprecedented in the history of parliaments that a premier should conspire against his own government."

He said that Ferenc Nagy was forced out because he opposed the nationalization of banks and a capital levy of 75 per cent. These two measures, he declared, would have spelled the end of private industry and would have allowed the Communists to take over 72 per cent of the Hungarian industry owned by three main banks.

Proposed Election Law Assailed

Vince Nagy demanded to know why Dinnyes had failed to mention freedom of the press in his initial address to Parliament. He also attacked the proposed new election law, which he said would prevent a large portion of the anti-Communist element from voting. While the leftists heckled and booed, some Smallholder deputies applauded.

Reports circulated, meanwhile, that the grand executive committee of Parliament will meet soon, in defiance of Communist wishes, to discuss the coup. Some political observers said the committee would question the pro-Communist attitude of Dinnyes and might even consider action designed to force his ouster.

A reliable informant said that the Communists, on the other hand, were planning to force the resignation of President Zoldan Tildy, only remaining member of the old regime of Smallholders who still holds high office.

Prize Moose Flee Before Forest Fire

Kenai Peninsula, Alaska, June 19 (U.P.).The world's largest moose fled today from a wind-whipped forest fire which was destroying huge stands of timber and some of the world's best hunting and fishing grounds.

Herds of other big game stampeded before the crackling flames, which spread over a 100-mile area in the northern section of the peninsula, heavily wooded with giant spruce.

Unless it rains soon the entire peninsula may be swept by the flames.

The peninsula is the home of the world's largest moose. Hunters travel thousands of miles to hunt for the big animals.

Value of Turkish Lira Is Pegged by Monetary Fund

The International Monetary Fund yesterday pegged the par value of the Turkish lira at the ratio of 2.8 to the American dollar.

The fund's action represented acceptance of the existing rate as proposed by the Turkish government. The par value determines the basis on which the lira will be exchanged for other currencies. It cannot be changed more than 10 per cent without the fund's approval.

Turkey was one of the four countries to join the international fund at the last meeting of the board of governors. Par values have not been set for the currencies of the other three late comers —Syria, Lebanon and Italy.

The fund said parties for the Turkish lira in terms of gold are .317382 grams of fine gold per Turkish lira; and 98 Turkish liras per troy ounce of fine gold.

Reds See U. S. Loan to Greece Indicating Leftist Crackdown

Athens, June 19 (AP).—Communist informants predicted today that the signing of the American loan agreement would be followed by a crackdown on Greece's extreme left and cited the execution today of 17 men on the island of Aegina as evidence of the trend.

They said they were prepared to go underground to wage civil war against the government.

Fourteen accused of treason and three Communists convicted of murder during the Greek revolution made up the group executed by a firing squad on Aegina this morning.

The newspaper Eleftheria Ellada of the Communist-dominated EAM (National Liberation Front) said the executions "prove the government intends to extend the civil war to Athens." Aegina Island is about 10 miles off Piraeus, the port of Athens.

Newspapers supporting the government have been saying for the past few days in reference to any new Communist uprisings that "we are preparing to meet any eventuality" and there were indications the government would adopt a stiffer attitude toward Communist spokesmen.

Wilson to Head Turk Aid Plan

President Truman yesterday completed the staff to administer the 400-million-dollar Greek-Turkish aid program by naming Ambassador Edwin C. Wilson as head of the American mission to Turkey.

Wilson

Wilson, a career diplomat, will carry on his duties as envoy to Turkey while serving as chief of the 100-million-dollar program to modernize Turkey's armed forces and help her resist Communist pressure.

He is a native of Palatka, Fla.

The administrator for the 300-million-dollar Greek program, former Gov. Dwight Griswold of Nebraska, is to leave for Athens in about two weeks. The vanguard of his official staff of some two score is to leave next week.

Yugoslav Communists Attack Bishop

Trieste, June 19 (U.P.).—Yugoslav communists broke into a Catholic seminary today and manhandled Monsignor Antonio Santin, Bishop of Trieste, while the Yugoslav-controlled police stood by idly, Trieste police reported.

Bishop Santin, 50, was struck on the head. The seminary was damaged "considerably."

The bishop went to Capo D'istria in the Yugoslav zone of the Istrian peninsula, 12 miles south of Trieste, to participate in a festival honoring the town's patron saint.

He was jeered by a hostile crowd of Yugoslav communists, and sought refuge in the seminary. The crowd broke through the door and attacked Bishop Santin and members of his entourage.

power discussions of the plan and added:

"The reply of the Soviet government is awaited and the House will understand that until it is received there is nothing I can usefully say on the subject today. I know the greatest interest of the House in the United States proposals and I wish very much it was possible to say more about the position."

Referring to Hungary and Bulgaria, Bevin said:

"I am convinced myself that there is a determinatiof to wipe out opposition in these countries. It is most unfortunate . . . I am against a one-party state . . . It is developing over a very wide area in eastern Europe, not by desire.

"If it came about by desire or opinion, I would say nothing about it, but force—that I think is the wrong approach to the whole problem."

Bevin denied the Soviet charge of British interference in Hungary with which Russia countered Britain's demand for information on the recent coup d'etat in Budapest.

"Therefore it was with great regret to me when our ambassador saw Mr. (V. M.) Molotov and he (Molotov) got very annoyed and made counter charges against Great Britain to which, I may say, I have grown very accustomed."

Bevin, who heard Eden denounce Russian policy affecting Hungary, Romania, Bulgaria and Greece, joined Eden in praising the Marshall proposal.

"We regard Mr. Marshall's proposal as a great opportunity for Europe," he said. "I think so far we have lost no time in getting things started. We shall continue pushing ahead with all possible energy."

Eden went further. Of Marshall's promise to help European countries financially if they would work together, he said:

"This offers the possibility of creating a new Europe—it is the second chance that so rarely comes. . . . When rarely this does come, it is in the nature of a miracle."

When left wing Laborite D. N. Pritt interrupted to say that the Communists had not gained a single seat in the government or in Parliament through the recent Hungarian shakeup, Eden rejoined:

"I canot believe that the honorable member is quite so simple as that."

To another interruption he replied:

"If these things really took place despite the Kremlin, I shall indeed be surprised."

Pravda Assails Acheson for Red 'Slander'

Moscow, June 19 (AP).—Pravda accused Dean Acheson today of making a "gross and rude slander against the Soviet Union," and said the retiring American Undersecretary of State and his "masters" apparently believed they could dictate to Russia.

The article in the Communist Party newspaper, answering Acheson's speech Sunday at Connecticut's Wesleyan University, was the sharpest attack ever published in the Russian press against the American foreign policy.

Pravda asserted that the Soviet Union was the world's greatest power whose sovereignty could not be weakened by anyone "no matter how fat his pocket is with dollars."

The newspaper declared that the "figleaf Truman Doctrine" had lost for the United States the foreign prestige established under President Roosevelt, and denied Acheson's assertions that Russia had forced communism upon European countries.

"The whole world knows that the Soviet Union scrupulously maintains international obligations taken upon itself and never interferes in the internal affairs of other states," the article said.

Pravda said that the undersecretary and his "masters" thought that lend-lease to Russia during the war constituted "some sort of advantage, some political investment, some political interest which will allow American imperialism to have some influence on Soviet politics, or even the right to dictate to the Soviet Union on how to behave."

"Acheson has had a few predecessors, especially in the days of the former Axis," the article said.

Gen. Collins Warns of Russian Army, Air Strength in Europe

Miami, Fla., June 19 (AP).—Lieut. Gen. J. Lawton Collins said today Russian soldiers outnumber those of the United States Army 20 to 1.

Collins

In addition, he declared, the Russians have "over 10,000" airplanes and "we cannot man 4000 aircraft today."

Collins said United States forces in Europe "are so small that they could easily be overrun."

He estimated that Russia is "capable of putting 200 divisions in the field, have them in the field right now," compared with 10 United States divisions. He said "Russia's satellites in Europe" could provide another 100 divisions.

The War Department, Collins said, feels that in case of war "great ports like New York City would be logical targets, that great industrial centers like Detroit, Pittsburgh and Chicago would be areas of attack, not the military dispositions of troops deployed in the field."

Lie Says U.N. Ready to Aid Marshall Plan

Lake Success, N. Y., June 19 (U.P.).—United Nations Secretary General Trygve Lie said today the U. N. had machinery for aiding Europe's recovery and he felt sure the governments setting up the Marshall rehabilitation program would use it.

Lie told a news conference that the world organization was anxious to help "at all times and in the strongest way" in carrying out Secretary of State George C. Marshall's program.

Lie expressed pleasure over the suggestion by Foreign Ministers Georges Bidault of France and Ernest Bevin of Britain that the countries of Europe link an unified air program to the U. N. through the newly formed Economic Commission for Europe.

He said he believed there was no need for "any new investigation" of the relief and recovery needs of the continent because various U. N. agencies and related organs had the information on hand.

"All that is needed now," he said, "is to add together all the requests and surveys that have been made and figure out how to handle them."

U. S. Marines End Postwar Job in China

Tientsin, China, June 19 (U.P.).—United States Marines completed their postwar mission in China today. They sailed for home from Tangku Harbor, ending 50 years of American military power in China.

Maj. Gen. Samuel L. Howard, new commander of Marine garrison forces in the Pacific, flew to Pearl Harbor.

The only remaining Marines in North China are in a small unit at the port of Tsingtao, where they will guard United States naval activities connected with the training of Chinese navy personnel.

Many of the Marines who left today were on duty in China before the war.

As they left Tangku, Chinese Communist seaborne forces drove toward the port in an attempt to cut off Tientsin from the Gulf of Chihli.

Government Grip Slips

Nanking, June 19 (AP).—The Chinese government's loosening grip on Manchuria slipped dangerously today under Communist pounding at the lifelines—the railways and the Nationalist's main port of Yingkow.

The independent Shih Chieh Jih Pao said government troops had pulled out of positions only 12 miles east of Yingkow. Other press dispatches said the Communists were closing in from all sides.

The government's position appeared equally desperate at besieged Szepingkai, the railway city strongpoint on the route from Mukden to Changchun, Manchuria's by-passed capital.

The government garrison gave ground, and was consuming ammunition faster than it could be dropped to it by planes. The Communists had set up artillery inside Szpingkai and were shelling the heart of the city, press dispatches from Mukden said.

In Inner Mongolia, the government's Central News Agency declared that more than 1000 "Russian speaking" Mongolian "bandits" had attacked in northern Chahar Province, which adjoines pro-Soviet Outer Mongolia.

The unconfirmed dispatch said the nomads were burning, looting and killing in the villages and appeals for help had been sent to the government base at Kalgan, in southern Chahar.

Plead for U. S. Loan

Shanghai, June 19 (AP).—Even drowning out the noise of civil war reverses in the past 24 hours is a new wave of National Government pleas, demands and claims which appear to add up to a renewed bid for an American loan.

The tenor is one of desperation—"save us now or take the consequences."

The high, policy-making Kuomintang central political council drastically proposed withdrawing nationalist forces from Manchuria. This was reported from a closed-door session.

It sounded like a warning to America either to finance Chiang Kai-shek's China or let Manchuria pass into the zone of Communist influence.

American observers in China admit it puts the United States in a difficult position because they know that once America starts financing Chiang's war it would be pretty hard to ever stop—and it would be expensive.

They call attention to the fact that even with the vast amount of American aid given China since the end of the Japanese war, Chiang, if anything, is worse off today than on V-J day.

Sit Tight on Loan

By the United Press

The U. S. Government continued to sit tight yesterday on the 500-million-dollar Chinese recovery loan which has been held up because of the civil war in China, but it gave semi official approval to a private campaign for voluntary American contributions to help the suffering Chinese pople.

The United States Export-Import Bank's authority to grant the 500 million dollar loan expires at the end of this month, unless extended by Congress, and Administration leaders have given no hint whether President Truman will ask for an extension.

6 Jap Officers Get Noose for Guam Crimes

Guam, June 19 (U.P.).—Six former Japanese army and navy officers and men, who murdered American prisoners of war and Guamanians during the occupation, were hanged last night in the first such executions on this American-occupied Pacific bastion.

The hangings avenged the slayings of 110 defenseless American soldiers, civilians and marines, and the clubbing to death and cannibalization of a Guam native and his son.

Those executed included two former Japanese vice admirals who ordered the decapitation of 107 prisoners.

Former Vice Admiral Koso Abe, who ordered the beheading of nine Marine Raiders on Kwajalein in 1942 when they "became a burden" to his command, went to the gallows first.

Following Abe were former Rear Admiral Shigematsu Sakaibara, former Lieut. Col. Kikuji Ito, former Capt. Noboru Nakajima, former Superior Pvt. Kiyoshi Takahashi and former Seaman 1/c Kohu Shoji.

Eviction Trial Set For 40 in Northeast

A motion to dismiss eviction proceedings against 40 residents of an apartment house at 128 C st. ne. was overruled yesterday by Judge Thomas Dewey Quinn in Municipal Court. The judge set next Friday for a jury trial on the evictions.

The Concord Corp., building owners, declared through Attorney Leonard Melrod that the 18 apartments should be emptied in order to permit renovations leading to improvements and expansion of capacity. Herman Miller represented the tenants.

Reds Insist On Veto Power In Atom Cases

Lake Success, June 19 (AP).—Andrei A. Gromyko, Soviet deputy foreign minister, asserted today that Russia would never agree to any atomic control plan in which the big powers had no authority to veto the punishment of violators.

The Soviet delegate made his declaration at a closed session of the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission's working committee as it sought unsuccessfully to resolve the differences between the United States and Russia on this major issue.

This was the second consecutive day that Gromyko had jarred the U. N. with blunt statements on major Soviet policy. Yesterday he told the commission for conventional armaments that its approval of a United States plan of work might lead to the "collapse" of the entire arms reduction program. He strongly hinted that Russia might veto the United States plan when it came before the Security Council.

Gromyko today stressed once again that Russia did not want to inject the veto into the day-to-day operations of the proposed international atomic control agency, but he made it clear that as far as Russia was concerned the veto must apply on the question of imposing penalties.

United States Deputy Frederick Osborn said that Gromyko's position on the day-to-day operations did not seem to be far from that of the United States, but that the Soviet position on penalties was another story. He proposed that the discussions on the veto be postponed until the Atomic Commission's political committee could take it up.

There was no indication when this might be. The political committee met this afternoon to consider several other aspects of the atomic control problem.

Gromyko contended the Security Council had the sole right to act to preserve international peace and that all atomic violations which threatened peace must come before the council, where the big power veto applies.

Any other procedure, he said, not only would be a violation of the U.N. Charter but would result in "an inadmissible situation."

Australian Representative Col. W. R. Hodgson said he had difficulty visualizing how the atomic control agency could function "within the framework of the Security Council."

"Australia can never accept the Soviet amendment," Hodgson said.

House Group Noncommital On 'Fascism'

By the United Press

The House Administration Committee yesterday left up to the House itself the question whether 100,000 copies of a controversial report entitled "Fascism in Action" will be printed at public expense.

The committee sent to the floor without recommendation a resolution by Representative Wright Patman (D., Tex.) to have the report printed as a companion piece to "Communism in Action." Congress last session ordered 500,000 copies of the Communism report printed.

Patman, sponsor of the report on Fascism, defended his tract against charges by Representative Fred Busbey (R., Ill.), who objected that it made no mention of Communism.

Patman said all references to Communism were left out deliberately because the report was a supplement to "Communism in Action" which did not mention Fascism.

Busbey also opposed the report on grounds that it might endanger United States diplomatic relations with Spain. He said members of the Catholic faith also might object to it.

The committee postponed action on the report two weeks ago. At that time, Patman and Dr. Ernest Griffith, chief of the legislative reference service, agreed to make changes to meet Busby's objections.

Banking Strike Slows French Financial Life

Paris, June 19 (AP).—Financial activity came to a virtual standstill throughout France today in a nation-wide strike of bank employes for salary increases. All financial institutions except the Bank of France, which operates under special statute, were affected.

The workers are demanding a new bracket at the top of their salary scale, and the advancement of all employes by one bracket.

Workers in three of Paris' largest department stores and a number of 5-and-10-cent stores struck simultaneously for higher wages.

Meanwhile the French cabinet, alarmed by the protests of strikers and Communists against its proposed new revenue-raising measures, decided to reexamine its 140 billion franc ($1,166,000,000) tax proposal before presenting it formally to the nation.

The Communist Political Bureau denounced the measure as an "intolerable burden on the worker and the little people," and said it would fight it in the National Assembly.

Poling Urges Enactment of Training Bill

A prominent Baptist minister and religious editor yesterday urged Congress to immediately approve universal military training and other plans to make America strong.

Dr. Daniel A. Poling, editor of the Christian Herald and a member of President Truman's advisory commission on universal training, testified before the House Armed Services Committee.

He warned the group that the present world situation menaced the United States and said that "we cannot have adequate national defense without universal military training."

Representative Johnson (D., Tex.) asked the Baptist leader if he considered the United States was "seriously threatened."

"I more than think so," replied Dr. Poling.. "I am so moved by it, I lie awake at night."

"You think Congress should act at once on this," returned Johnson.

"So help me, God, yes," the minister said fervently.

Another member of the President's advisory committee also backed the bill at yesterday's hearing. He was Truman K. Gibson, jr., Chicago lawyer and former adviser to wartime Secretary of War Stimson on Negro troop policies.

He declared adoption of universal training was the only course we have open to promote world peace.

ard Thompson, New York; First Engineer Robert B. Donnelly, New York; Second Engineer W. E. Morris, New York; First Radio Officer Nelson C. Miles, Port Washington, N. Y.; Second Radio Officer Arthur O. Olson, New York.

Surviving crew members were announced as:

Stewardess Jane Bray and Purser Anthony Volpe, both of New York; Third Officer Eugene W. Roddenberry, River Edge, N. J.

Hart had been a pilot 16 years. The airline said he set a world record in January, 1945, by completing 12 trips across the South Atlantic in 13 days and 15 hours.

At Istanbul, a Pan American spokesman said the plane involved in the crackup had been turned back from Gander, Newfoundland, earlier in the week on its outward flight because of engine trouble.

(In Washington, the Civil Aeronautics Board said it is sending an investigator to Syria to look into the crash. The assignment was given Ralph Reed.)

Plane's First Officer Was Maryland Native

Robert Stanley McCoy, 25, first officer, was well known in the Hagerstown, Md., area. He was born in Maugansville, Md., a few miles outside of Hagerstown, and was graduated from Hagerstown High School in 1939. Senate Committee Approves Control Of Short Materidl

By The Associated Press

The Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday approved a one-year extension of the Government's authority to control exports, imports and domestic use of certain scarce materials.

The controls will expire June 30 unless Congress acts before then. President Truman, in a message May 23, urged the extension to enabale the Nation to meet its foreign commitments.

Benjamin Franklin U. To Give 243 Degrees

Two hundred forty-three graduates of Benjamin Franklin University Accountancy School will receive degrees next Wednesday evening. The annual commencement exercises will be held in the Presidential Room of the Statler at 8 p. m.

John T. Kennedy, president of the university, will deliver an address on "Professional Mastery" at the ceremony.

Italy President Ready to Quit

Rome, June 19 (U.P.).—President Enrico de Nicola said today that he would resign in 10 or 15 days, a move that may well mean the end of Premier Alcide de Gasperi's non-Communist government.

Because de Gasperi's 18-day-old cabinet excluded both Communists and leftwing Socialists, he has been continually assailed by those groups, and its existence has been almost a day-to-day proposition.

When De Nicola resigns, De Gasperi and his government will have to resign as a formality. Normally, the new President might be expected to refuse the resignations. But the political situation in Italy being what it is, De Gasperi is afraid that the resignations will be accepted.

Most politicians who have seen De Nicola recently agreed that he was suffering from nervous exhaustion.

Poling Urges Enactment of Training Bill

A prominent Baptist minister and religious editor yesterday urged Congress to immediately approve universal military training and other plans to make America strong.

Dr. Daniel A. Poling, editor of the Christian Herald and a member of President Truman's advisory commission on universal training, testified before the House Armed Services Committee.

He warned the group that the present world situation menaced the United States and said that "we cannot have adequate national defense without universal military training."

Representative Johnson (D., Tex.) asked the Baptist leader if he considered the United States was "seriously threatened."

"I more than think so," replied Dr. Poling. "I am so moved by it, I lie awake at night."

"You think Congress should act at once on this," returned Johnson.

"So help me, God, yes," the minister said fervently.

Another member of the President's advisory committee also backed the bill at yesterday's hearing. He was Truman K. Gibson, jr., Chicago lawyer and former adviser to wartime Secretary of War Stimson on Negro troop policies.

He declared adoption of universal training was the only course we have open to promote world peace.

Surviving crew members were announced as:

Stewardess Jane Bray and Purser Anthony Volpe, both of New York; Third Officer Eugene W. Roddenberry, River Edge, N. J.

Hart had been a pilot 16 years. The airline said he set a world record in January, 1945, by completing 12 trips across the South Atlantic in 13 days and 15 hours.

At Istanbul, a Pan American spokesman said the plane involved in the crackup had been turned back from Gander, Newfoundland, earlier in the week on its outward flight because of engine trouble.

(In Washington, the Civil Aeronautics Board said it is sending an investigator to Syria to look into the crash. The assignment was given Ralph Reed.)

Roosevelt Opposed Wallace As 'Unpredictable,' Farley Says

Jim Farley says President Roosevelt Called:

LaGuardia	Ickes	Wallace	Morgenthau
Swelled Head	A Fighter	Unpredictable	Fuss Budget

James A. Farley said yesterday that President Roosevelt told him he did not think the Democrats should run Henry A. Wallace for President in 1940 because "you never know what Henry will do."

Farley, former chairman of the Democratic National Committee, related the story in the second of a Collier's magazine series of articles on "Why I Broke With Roosevelt."

The name of Wallace, then Secretary of Agriculture, came up in dinner conversation at the White House the night of April 12, 1938, Farley said. He quoted the late President as commenting:

"Henry would like to run for President. However, I'd rather have a fellow like Ickes, who, at least, is a fighter.

"Ickes will go through with whatever he has in mind. But you never know what Henry will do."

But on another occasion, Farley recalled, the President spoke in a different vein of Harold L. Ickes, then Secretary of the Interior. Farley quoted Mr. Roosevelt: "I think Harold Ickes is responsible for many of the stories that leak out of Cabinet meetings."

The current article depicts Mr. Roosevelt as a man who thought former Mayor LaGuardia of New York had a swelled head and considered former Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau a fussbudget.

Farley said he told Mr. Roosevelt, in discussing LaGuardia for Governor of New York:

"I just can't believe the Democrats would turn over the party to LaGuardia. He is an opportunist and would desert at a moment's notice if he thought it would be to his advantage."

Farley added that the President replied:

"Yes, LaGuardia has a swelled head, and it's my guess that he has presidential aspirations."

Once, said Farley, when he asked about Morgenthau's health, the President replied lightly:

"Oh, Henry works himself up. While I was away he was terribly concerned about the tripartite agreement between the United States, France and Britain on money stabilization.

"He was calling London every other minute and sweating over developments. Now he's distressed about the relief program, not being in sympathy with it. I'll have to rub his brow and he'll be all right."

Another time, Farley related an anecdote he said was told him by Presidential Secretary Steve Early:

"On the day Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., and Ethel duPont were married in Wilmington, Steve said, Morgenthau called during the height of the festivities and excitedly demanded that the President be put on the phone to approve the American Government's position on the French franc—a matter of much concern at the time.

"The President was relaxing at the reception in the duPont home when Henry called. Steve found the boss sipping champagne. When he relayed the Morgenthau message the President frowned at the interruption and said, 'Tell Henry I don't give a damn what the Government's position is on the French franc.'"

Farley also related that Mr. Roosevelt:

1. Felt that the 1937 business recession was the work of businessmen who wanted his administration to look bad.

2. Suggested that Farley run for Governor of New York, a move which Vice President Garner interpreted as an effort to keep Farley out of the presidential field in 1940.

Major Party Committees List Finances

By The Associated Press

The national political committees, getting set for the 1948 presidental campaign, have reported this financial picture to Congress:

The Democrats in the last three months put $150,000 more into their war chest than they took out. The Republicans spent $78,000 more than they took in.

The Democrats would have gone into the red, too, had it not been for their annual Jackson Day dinners to whoop it up for the party and raise money. The dinners brought in something over $230,000.

Political organizations are required by law to file quarterly statements of income and spending with the House clerk.

The Democrats said they took in $354,714 from March 1 to May 31 and spent $204,509. They said they had $150,205 in the bank on May 31.

They had $29,423 in unpaid bills at the end of May, but also $90,000 out on loans—$50,000 to the New York State committee, $30,000 to the California committee and $5000 each to the Kentucky committee and the Maryland Jefferson Day dinner committee.

The biggest debt was listed as $20,063 to the Reynolds Metal Co. of Richmond, Va., for "pictures." The item was not further described.

The Republican National Committee did not list its bank balance, debts or loans.

It reported total contributions in the last three months of $99,604 and payments of $177,834.

Contributions to the Republicans of $1000 and up included:

United Republican Finance Committee for metropolitan New York, $42,500; Joseph F. Heil, Milwaukee, $1000; North Dakota Republican State Central Committee, $1700; Mrs. Jacob France, Baltimore, $1000; George G. Mason, New York, $2500; Thomas A. Pappas, Belmont, Mass., $1000; Indiana Republican State Central Committee, $7500; Montana Committee, $1350; Joseph S. Wishart, Lincoln, Neb., $1150; Spokane County, Wash., Republican Central Committee, $1,946; Franklin Bond, trustee, Albuquerque, N. M., $2500.

These were the top amounts the Democrats got from Jackson Day affairs:

Washington, D. C., $50,00; West Virginia, $7372; Minnesota, $15,274; New Mexico, $7500; Denever, $3450; Fargo, N. The Senate Expenditures Committee yesterday approved legislation creating a 12-member commission to look over Government agencies with an eye to promoting "economy, efficiency, and improved service."

The commission would report to Congress 10 days after the Eighty-first Congress convenes—about a year and a half from now.

The measure was introduced by Senator Lodge (R., Mass.).

Didn't Impugn Clark Motive In Vote Case, FBI Head Says

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Saying his testimony had been "misinterpreted," FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover declared yesterday he had no intention of implying that Attorney General Tom C. Clark had "an ulterior motive" in ordering only a limited investigation of Kansas City vote frauds last year.

Hoover sent an explanation of his testimony to the Senate subcommittee investigating charges of an alleged Justice Department "whitewash" of primary election frauds in President Truman's own home political bailiwick.

The FBI chief's letter was addressed to Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.), subcommittee chairman.

"I think in all fairness I should make the observation that in the years the present Attorney General Tom C. Clark, has been associated with the Department of Justice, I have had the opportunity of working with him in innumerable cases, and I am glad to state that he has not in any way taken any action to prevent any investigation being conducted to its logical conclusion," Hoover wrote.

Referring to a memorandum in which he had penned an inquiry to a subordinate, "Were we so restricted?" (in investigating the fraud charges) Hoover wrote:

"I did not intend my inquiry as an indication that I had any question in my mind that an ulterior motive had actuated the Attorney General or the Department of Justice with respect to the scope of the preliminary inquiry ordered under the established policy."

Ferguson made public the letter as the full Judiciary Committee postponed for 11 days action on a resolution for a $10,000 inquiry into the Justice Department's handling of the fraud charges.

The senatorial inquiry, laden with political dynamite, arose out of the Fifth District Democratic primary in Missouri last August, in which President Truman had asked for the purging of incumbent Roger C. Slaughter, in favor of his candidate, Enos Axtell.

Grand Jury Ordered For Vote Investigation

Kansas City, June 19 (AP).—A Federal grand jury to investigate the 1946 Kansas City primary election was ordered today for July 8 by Federal Judge Albert A. Ridge.

The jury, which will carry authority to indict in connection with the theft of primary election data May 28 from the county courthouse here, was asked by Richard K. Phelps, special Federal prosecutor named by Attorney General Tom C. Clark.

The jury of 23 is to be selected from a panel of 50 drawn from western Missouri.

Phelps, in his application for the grand jury, certified there had been violations of Federal laws involving the right of suffrage of citizens in the Western District of Missouri, including conspiracies to defraud the United States of its rights to investigate freely the other Federal violations.

Senate Unit Approves Johnson

Jones Johnson

The Senate Judiciary Committee by a vote of 10 to 1 yesterday recommended to the Senate that it confirm the nomination of former Representative Jed Johnson of Oklahoma to be a judge of the United States Customs Court.

Johnson's nomination had been protested by Harold L. Ickes, former Secretary of the Interior. The Oklahoman for many years headed a House Appropriations Subcommittee, which frequently slashed Ickes' budget.

The committee also approved yesterday the nominations of Marvin Jones, former War Food administrator, to be chief justice of the United States Court of Claims and Federal District Judge John Caskie Collet of Missouri to be a judge of the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals.

been told at the department that I'll have to take quite a cut or lose my job because of the appropriations slash."

Mrs. Moreno's testimony, delivered in strained, trembling voice, stirred Representative James C. Auchincloss (R., N. J.) to comment:

"You are a very brave person, Mrs. Moreno. Don't let your courage fail you now."

A similar emotionally eloquent plea to keep the centers open was made by Mrs. Violet Arner of 4562 Lilypond dr. ne. A divorcee, she leaves her three children at a center so she can put in a full day's work at the State Department.

Wallace Boyd of 1421 12th st. nw., told the subcommittee that he was the sole support and guardian of his grandchild, Benjamin Watts, 6.

"His mother and grandmother are dead," explained Boyd. "I work at the Government Printing Office, and if the (Harrison) center is closed, I'll have to quit work or let my grandchild run around in the streets and the alleys."

Raymond F. Clapp, assistant director of public welfare, pointed out that it costs approximately $600 a child per annum to maintain the centers, and that the proposed $150,000 appropriation would be enough only for seven of the 12 centers.

Testimony developed that the 300 D. C. families making use of the day care centers couldn't afford for the most part to send their children to private care centers, and that 20 per cent of the children would become dependent on the city for assistance should the District care centers be closed.

The full House District Committee will take up the legislation this morning.

Westchester Apt. Rental Hearings Are Concluded

Hearings on Realest Corp.'s petition for a rent increase at Westchester Apartments, 4000 Cathedral ave. nw., were concluded yesterday.

Since Monday about 20 tenants have appeared before Rent Control Examiner Ernest F. Williams to protest the proposed 17½ per cent boost.

Following inspection of the buildings and further study of the evidence, Examiner Williams will announce his decision.

Senators Approve Naval School

The Senate Armed Services Committee yesterday approved a bill to establish a naval postgraduate school for line officers at Monterey, Calif.

The bill would authorize the Navy to purchase the Del Monte Hotel and adjoining grounds and equip it for a permanent school at a cost of $2,500,000.

thing at this time," he declared, "at a moment when our foreign relations are in a tense situation."

He added that the measure would raise living costs at a time "when large numbers of citizens, if not groaning under the high cost of living, are at least feeling it intensely."

In favoring the bill, Senator Robert A. Taft (Ohio), Republican leader, stressed that the bill "only gives the President discretionary authority to raise tariffs." He asserted objections to it "are utterly unfounded."

"It won't interfere at all with our foreign trade," Taft shouted.

Taft said the problem "is one that will confront us again in two years," when Congress is called upon to draw up a new agriculture program.

Hotel to Install 'Radar' Cook Stove

Within the next two weeks the Statler will install a sensational stove which works on the same principle as radar. This "Radarange," which will cook a steak in less than a minute and bake a cake in 22 seconds, will use no fire and produce no external heat.

Food will be cooked by friction on the new stove, which Statler officials say will do the work of a whole battery of ordinary ranges. Raytheon Manufacturing Co., Waltham, Mass., will manufacture the first of these stoves for the Statler. If it is successful, others will be installed later.

Curley May Leave Hospital Soon

Cohasset, Mass., June 19 (U.P.).—Mayor James M. Curley of Boston may leave the Cohasset private hospital within a week, it was said today. A report of his physical condition was sent to a United States District Court at Washington where he faces a prison sentence.

Dr. Edward H. Schott said Curley had his "best day" yesterday. The physician said Curley had high blood pressure, diabetes, headaches, a numbness of one arm and hemorrhages in both eyes.

Nicaragua Regime Rebuffed

By the United Press

The United States yesterday applied the generally discredited "nonrecognition policy" to the new revolutionary regime in Nicaragua.

The State Department announced that, after informal discussions with Latin American nations, it had decided not to recognize the regime which came to power through a military coup d'etat last month.

"We will have no relations with the Nicaraguan Embassy in Washington and instructions have been sent to the United States Embassy in Nicaragua to refrain from having any relations with the present regime," the State Department spokesman, Lincoln White, said.

NOT "A DRUG ON THE MARKET"—Betty Ellingson, a classy lassie, models a candy-stripe sun suit for members of the Women's Auxiliary of the District Pharmaceutical Association

The prices of drug store commodities, such as toothpaste, shampoo soap and other items, increased very little if at all during the war, Paul C. Olsen, professor of economics, Philadelphia College of Pharmacy, stated yesterday.

Speaking before the ninety-fifth annual meeting of the D. C. Pharmaceutical Association at the Mayflower Hotel, Olsen gave credit to pharmacists for keeping prices down.

While members of the association listened to several speakers, their wives enjoyed a fashion show and card party, sponsored by the Women's Pharmaceutical Auxiliary at the Mayflower Hotel.

Proceeds from the party will be contributed to the Children's Hospital drive.

Other speakers at the association meeting included Dr. Robert P. Fischelis, secretary of the American Pharmaceutical Association, and B. F. Mull, director of trade relations and advertising, Eli Lilly & Co.

The two-day meeting was brought to a close last night with a banquet at the Mayflower Hotel. Dr. Robert L. Swain, editor of Drug Topics, was guest speaker.

U. S., Australia Map Joint Defense of Pacific

Admiral Louis E. Denfeld, Pacific Fleet Commander-in-Chief, disclosed yesterday he had concluded informal discussions on joint Pacific defense plans with Australian military and naval chiefs.

The Pacific theater commander said he had visited Australia on a three-fold mission: (1) to discuss the disposition of the wartime United States key base of Manus—which is in Australian-mandated territory; (2) to thank the Australians for the welcome recently given an American task force; (3) to review Southwest Pacific defense plans.

There was no demarcation of zones, allocation of responsibilities or other concrete steps taken in connection with the latter, Denfeld said.

He declined, at a news conference, to estimate the size of the Russian Pacific fleet. He added, however, that the Russians probably had a "considerable number of submarines and some destroyers," but no aircraft carriers in the Pacific.

Denfeld said Australia has under way a five-year naval expansion program. Two light aircraft carriers now building in England will be delivered within three months, to be followed by a battle cruiser and some destroyers.

The Pacific commander said this will give Australia a "compact and very useful fleet in the event of another emergency." He issued the "down-under" navy an invitation to visit West Coast United States ports when the new ships are ready.

Rain Forecast As Flood Rolls Down Valley

Quincy, Ill., June 19 (U.P.).—A 24-foot flood crest rolled down the Mississippi River tonight and authorities ordered die-hard residents, many of whom had ignored previous warnings to leave their homes, to evacuate the entire 54-mile stretch protected by the Sny Levee south of here.

About 2500 persons still were in the area, which is 20 miles south of Quincy and includes the farming town of Hull.

An estimated 20,000 persons already were homeless as the mighty river pounded levees weakened by recent floods, spread over fertile cornbelt farmlands and washed into river towns including Canton, Mo., and Mark Twain's beloved Hannibal.

Hundreds Work on Levees

Hundreds of men were battling with shovels—and their bare hands—to save towns and farmlands.

Hull, a community of 600 persons now swelled to 800 by refugees from other areas, lies two miles from the Mississippi.

The flood is expected to hit tomorrow night or Saturday, but most residents stayed, despite orders of Sheriff Clifford Windsor of Pike County to get out.

Despite the order, Charley Reed, 90-year-old farmer, thought he'd stay. Residents were afraid to leave their homes because they feared looting. One home, evacuated last night, was robbed early today.

Hannibal Hard Hit

Across the river, Hannibal, Mo., was hit hard. An estimated 40 to 50 blocks were flooded.

Additional rain was forecast for cornbelt States as the Mississippi flood rolled toward Quincy. Army engineers predicted a "nip and tuck battle" to save farmlands as the mighty river rose under pressure of flood torrents from rain-swollen tributaries in Iowa and Illinois.

Quincy, a city of 40,000 is situated on a bluff and was not in danger.

At least 400,000 acres of rich farmland from Keokuk, Iowa, to Clarksville, Mo., most of them protected by the Sny Levee, were in critical danger.

Recent floods in Iowa, Nebraska, Missouri and Illinois already had ravaged great areas of cropland.

Opposite Quincy, the Missouri lowlands are protected by the Fabius Levee. An engineer there warned that if the river still is at a 24-foot crest tomorrow, the area will be flooded.

"This levee just never will stand it," he said.

At Canton, population 2200, half the town was under water.

Troops and volunteers appeared to have won their battle to save the village of Oakville, Iowa, on the Iowa River, after a two-day siege. The Iowa crested at 18.5 feet during the night and began receding slowly.

Cites Clippings

Wood Links Barsky and 'Red' Hospital

Dr. Edward K. Barsky, head of the Joint Anti-Fascist Committee yesterday was linked in District Court with an allegedly Communist-dominated hospital serving Spanish loyalists in 1937-38.

The charges were brought out in newspaper clippings, which Representative John S. Wood (D., Ga.), former head of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, testified had been used by the committee as part of the basis for an investigation into the Anti-Fascist Committee.

The clippings, articles written by a New York columnist, cited Dr. Barsky as having been a leading light in the American Medical Bureau, which was said to have sponsored the hospital. The Hammer and Sickle flag and pictures of Stalin, according to the article appeared on the hospital walls.

On Trial for Contempt

Barsky and 15 other members of the Anti-Fascist Committee are being tried for contempt of Congress in failing to produce committee records subpenaed by one House Committee on Un-American Activities.

"What evidence against the Anti-Fascist Committee did your committee possess on December 4, 1945?" (the date subpenas were issued for Dr. Barsky and other members of the group), Defense Attorney O. John Rogge asked.

"There were on file a large number of letters and complaints," Wood replied. "We had information that the War Relief Board knew the Anti-Fascist Committee was carrying on political propaganda."

(The Anti-Fascist Committee had been licensed by President Roosevelt's War Relief Control Board to solicit funds for relief purposes only.)

Wood said his committee had received a letter from FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover to the effect that Anti-Fascist Committee sound trucks had been broadcasting anti-Franco and labor propaganda in New York.

Official Testifies

Earlier a State Department official testified that in his opinion the Anti-Fascist group "is honeycombed with Communists."

The official, Robert C. Alexander, assistant chief of the visa division, admitted he could name only three whom he believed were in this category. These he named as Dr. Barsky, Mrs. Ruth Leider, New York attorney, and James Lustig, New York official of the United Electrical Workers.

Associate Justice Richmond B. Keech, hearing the case, was expected to rule today on the admissibility as evidence of testimony given before the House committee by the defendants.

50,000 Mourn Young Fighter At Tel Aviv

Tel Aviv, June 19 (AP).—Fifty thousand Jewish mourners paid tribute today to a young Jewish underground fighter who was killed by a bomb here yesterday while participating in an antiterrorist operation.

The demonstration in which police said one fourth of Tel Aviv's population took part, came as the United Nations Special Committee on Palestine began an inspection tour of the Holy land. The commissioners spent today in Haifa and plan to visit Jericho and the Dead Sea tomorrow.

The streets of this all-Jewish metropolis were lined five deep for more than two miles, as the body of the underground member, 20-year-old Zeev Werber, was taken to a cemetery. Some 15,000 persons marched behind the black-draped casket.

Werber was described by police as a member of Hagana, underground organization which has vowed to prevent terrorism while the U. N. is investigating the Palestine situation. He was killed when a "booby trap" bomb exploded during a Hagana raid in a secret tunnel being dug by terrorists within 15 yards of the British military headquarters here.

The Palestine government, in the first such gesture as the funeral of an underground member, ordered its acting district commissioner for Tel Aviv to march in the procession. Inspector Christy of the Palestine police force was present in dress uniform.

In Haifa, meanwhile, four Arab city councilmen boycotted a reception given the U. N. Commission, which arrived there at noon from Jerusalem in a motorcade.

British Request Noted

Lake Success, N. Y., June 19 (U.P.).—A British request for help in stopping illegal Jewish immigration to Palestine has drawn a simple acknowledgment from the United States, but no promise of action, the United Nations announced today.

It said seven other countries had acknowledged without comment the British request, which was relayed to all U. N. members by U. N. Secretary General Trygve Lie.

Eisler Fights Passport Trial

Justice James W. Morris took under advisement yesterday motions designed to prevent the impending trial of Communist Gerhart Eisler on passport fraud charges.

Eisler contends that the alleged falsifications he made in getting a passport were in New York and says he should be tried there, if anywhere.

He also asked dismissal of the indictment for legal insufficiency. He contends he should be given time to get depositions from witnesses in Italy and Germany.

Eisler, who was convicted of contempt of Congress earlier this month, won one minor point. Justice Morris ordered the Government to supply him with information concerning the dates he is alleged to have used aliases in official statements.

In taking the other motions under advisement, Justice Morris tentatively set July 7 for Eisler's trial.

Psychopathic Patient Caught After Escape From Gallinger

A patient in the psychopathic ward of Gallinger Hospital escaped for a short while yesterday just as court papers, committing him to St. Elizabeths Hospital, arrived, Dr. Alvin Sweeney, hospital superintendent, reported.

The patient was identified as Hal Hanna, 19, of West Virginia, who was brought to Gallinger Hospital about five weeks ago.

He slipped through a door of the south building as an attendant entered with an armful of linen, according to police.

More than 30 policemen scoured a 2-mile square area behind the hospital before he was finally found at 2:30 p. m. lying in the bushes beside the railroad tracks near the Sousa Bridge.

Although the youth was described as "dangerous" in a police radio broadcast, police said he offered no resistance when they found him. He was taken to St. Elizabeths Hospital last night.

200-Mile Fight Takes Iraq Tribe To Red Territory

Tehran June 19 (AP).—The Iranian war ministry said tonight that the Barzani tribesmen who battled armies of three nations in a 200-mile trek from their native Iraq mountains had reached Russian territory.

The tribesmen, followers of Mullah Mustafa el Barzani, had been chased out of Iraq for banditry. They crossed over into Turkey, then came into Iran, where they engaged Iranian army forces in the northwest corner of Iran within sight of the Turkish and Russian borders.

A war ministry official said the band, estimated at 600 to 1000 men, crossed the Araxis River five miles east of a point where the borders of the three countries meet.

School Safety Classes Urged At Conference

A plea to put traffic safety lessons in the Nation's schools as a regular study course was sounded here yesterday at the President's Highway Safety Conference.

Dr. Forrest E. Long of New York University and chairman of the conference education advisory group, asserted "dry-as-dust, monotonous repetition of safety lessons will never accomplish the desired end."

The conference, in its second day of a three-day meeting at the Interior Auditorium, heard Washington's inter-industry safety program lauded and received reports on traffic safety progress and plans for Maryland and Virginia.

Gain Pointed Out

Citing a four per cent decrease in motor vehicle deaths in the 5-to-14 year age group, Dr. Long declared:

"When the schools and our public become aware of what may be accomplished, then safety education will take its rightful place in the programs of our schools."

His five-point proposal for the program: driver education and training; safety in pupil transportation; school safety patrols; teacher preparation, and methods of teaching safety.

Earlier in the day, Washington was lauded for the interindustry phases of its traffic safety campaign—one of the factors which won the District the Nation's grand award in the National Traffic Safety Contest.

The speaker was Lyman W. Slack, vice president of the Packard Motor Car Co. of Detroit and chairman of the National Inter-Industry Safety Committee.

The Washington Board of Trade and District division of the American Automobile Association celebrated Washington's awards in the national safety contests at a Mayflower Hotel luncheon.

Representative Everett M. Dirksen (R., Ill.), chairman of the House District Committee, termed the awards "a testimonial to the people and their disciplined conduct."

Washington won the grand award for cities of more than 500,000 population and second place in the National Pedestrian Protection Contest.

5 Arrested On Charges Of Lottery

Five persons were arrested in raids on two homes in the same block in Southeast Washington yesterday, police reported.

Mrs. Indiana Harris, 42, of 4428 Falls ter., se., was arrested at her home. Charged with operating a lottery and possession of lottery slips, she was released under $1500 bond for appearance today before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage.

Also arrested in her home was Frederick Sutton, 20, or 924 4th st. ne., who was charged with possession of lottery slips. Police said he then accompanied them to 4404 Falls ter. se., where they arrested Roosevelt Washington, 44, of that address, on charges of operating a lottery and possession of lottery slips.

Also arrested there for possession of lottery slips were Leroy L. Washington, 25, of 4404 Falls ter. se., and Robert L. Mack, 32, of 729 12th st. ne. All four men are scheduled to appear in Municipal Court today.

U. S. Sues Two As Drawing Two Salaries

With many worried about hanging on to one Government job, the Federal Government yesterday showed impatience with two persons charged with drawing compensation from two such posts.

Suit was filed in District Court yesterday against William J. Byrne of 2613 Monroe st. ne. for accepting $132.92 on a job as a substitute clerk in the Postoffice Department while also on the payroll of the Internal Revenue Bureau as an auditor.

The Government charged that the payment was made in 1920 and that in November 1939, a demand for repayment was made, but with no success.

The second suit was against Mrs. Helen F. Kloman of 2828 6th st. ne., for $338.23 paid to her by the Bureau of Economic Warfare in 1942, while at the same time she was on the payroll of the District Jail.

The Government asked for the money back in 1944, but got no response, the suit papers showed.

World Balance Up to America, Women Told

The United States can do many things alone toward attaining a balanced world economy which international organizations cannot do, Maryland farm women were told yesterday.

The speaker, John Park Young, is associate chief of the division of economic development of the State Department.

Young spoke before the fourth session of the week-long Rural Women's Short Course at the University of Maryland. Nearly 400 women visitors attended the visitors' day program.

"The United States is prosperous and most of the rest of the world is in privation," Young declared. "This is not a healthy condition for peace.

Cooperation Held Needed

"Today, our former customers and potential customers are destitute. We must help restore their buying power for business reasons as well as in the interests of peace. Political cooperation between countries will not get very far without economic and financial cooperation."

Others who addressed the session were Miss Iris Carpenter, author and correspondent; Capt. Rhoda J. Milliken, director of the Women's Bureau of the Metropolitan Police, and Mrs. Frank Parran, wife of the Surgeon General of the United States.

Miss Carpenter, who was one of the first two women to land in France after D-Day, described the privations and general lack of food in Europe as observed on a recent trip.

She also charged that Russia doesn't want war at home, but is promoting strife elsewhere.

Delinquency Cases Cited

Captain Milliken cited several case histories of delinquents and criminals whom she had come in contact with in declaring that the home is the place to correct delinquency. When it fails, the community must take over, she asserted.

The World Health Organization was discussed by Mrs. Parran, who said that it is aiming toward complete physical, mental and psychological well being and is not just concerned with the absence of sickness.

Last night more than 300 persons participated in a pageant entitled "At Home With Stephen Foster."

Walgreen Official Admits Embezzling $75,000 or More

Chicago, June 19 (AP).—William J. Cooney, 50, assistant treasurer of the Walgreen Co., drug concern, surrendered today to the State's attorney's office where Prosecutor Edmund Grant said Cooney told of embezzling between $75,000 and $100,009 since 1938.

The money was spent, Grant said Cooney related, on heavy drinking, bets on losing horses and on stock transactions.

Cooney's daughter and a married son accompanied him to the felony court. Bond was fixed at $10,000.

When confronted by company officials and representatives of the bonding company insuring him, Cooney confessed taking the money, Grant stated.

Zacharias Hits Bill to Unify Army and Navy

Rear Admiral Ellis M. Zacharias, USN, retired, yesterday attacked the Army-Navy unification bill on the ground that it would put the country in the hands of military men during wartime.

He told the House Expenditures Committee that the Administration-sponsored measure "presents a danger to us far greater than any possible enemy in the world today."

Zacharias said that on the basis of conversations he has had with Navy and Marine officers, he concludes "99 per cent are opposed" to the bill. The measure has been slated for action this session by GOP leaders.

San Salvador, June 19 (U.P.).—The foreign ministry announced today that it had ordered the chief of its diplomatic representation to withdraw from Spain, in compliance with the United Nations resolution of December 12, 1946.

El Salvador opposed the resolution during the debate in the U. N. Assembly. The official announcement today said, that "without abandoning the principles of international law adduced at that time," the country wanted to cooperate with the U. Philadelphia, June 19 (AP).—Joan Crawford, filmdom's perennial money-making movie queen, grabbed top billing on Warner Bros. pictures' salary list last year to the tune of $400,000.

Annual reports filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission also showed Bob Hope was paid $275,000 by Paramount Pictures, Inc., last year—just $24,700 more than Bing Crosby was paid by the same firm. Ray Milland was third with $234,166.

Warner's paid Stanley Morner, known to moviegoers as Dennis Morgan, $261,000, and Michael Curtin, director, $258,600.

State Firemen Pick Officers, Have Hot Time at Frostburg

Frostburg, Md., June 19 (AP).—Maryland's volunteer firemen elected a new slate of officers at their fifty-fifth annual convention today and some extra-curricular activities led Mayor Marshall C. Skidmore to ask that they put on the brakes.

Mayor Skidmore's appeal that the delegates "refrain from rowdyism and destruction of property" came after two incidents.

One group of smokeeaters had drummed up an impromptu ball game in the street, using rolls of bathroom stationery, when another gang came along and broke it up with fire hoses. Police reported some advertising signs were smashed in the ruckus.

Two firemen, otherwise unidentified, were found asleep in a bed on display in a window on Main st. One was in pajamas. The window had been broken a few days ago when some children backed their coaster wagon into it. The hole had been covered with cardboard.

Unopposed for election as president was Charles R. Stallings, jr., 35, of Pikesville. A volunteer fireman for 12 years, he previously was a vice president of the State association. He succeeds W. Bartgis Storm of Frederick.

Nominated without opposition along with Stallings were Landon Walston of Preston for first vice president; Harry C. Walters of Corriganville for second vice president; William Wilson of Midland for treasurer; Robert Benson of Lutherville for secretary, and the Rev. James Minter of Baltimore for chaplain.

The only election contest which developed was for a five-year term as trustee. The nominating group put up Curtis Larrimore of Easton and John O'Lexy of Jessups.

At Miners' Hospital, M. Frank Newman, service station manager at Mount Rainier, was reported still in serious condition today after falling from a car during festivities last night. Attendants said he had a possible skull fracture.

Montgomery Will Spend $7500 in Beetle War

Montgomery County will gang up on Japanese beetles this summer from every direction, County Agent O. W. Anderson said yesterday in announcing details of the control program.

Stressing that the county, State and Federal Government are each contributing $2500 to the enterprise, he also asked for wholehearted individual cooperation on the part of county residents.

Beetle traps, he said, are available at the Silver Spring and Bethesda County buildings and in the county agent's office, Rockville. They are leased on a basis of 20 cents a trap for two years and bait comes with them.

DDT should be used either as a dust or spray. Lime may be used to repel the beetles but will not kill them.

All public rights of way will be sprayed with a DDT solution. The vapor cloud will extend to a depth of from 100 feet to 300 feet from the road, Anderson said.

The Farm Bureau will offer a DDT spray service to farmers at their own expense. Last year the beetles caused an estimated $250,000 damage to crops in the county.

On August 1, the county will begin spreading milky white disease against the beetles in areas where it has not been applied in previous years. This is the best step toward permanent control, the county agent said.

Nevius Site

For the third time plans for construction of a new veterans' hospital in the Washington area have been thrown out of joint. Through a hamstringing rule, Representative Howard Smith has been able to block funds for purchase of the so-called Nevius site in Arlington pending further investigation by the House Appropriations Committee. The result of this interference by Congress in what is legitimately the selection function of the Veterans' Administration means that adequate veterans' medical service in the capital will be delayed indefinitely. Mount Alto Hospital, itself an old and reconverted building with only 350 beds, will be the best available.

After two previous plans for location in Washington proper had been ruled out, the Veterans' Administration looked over more than 100 potential sites. It had good reason to believe that it finally had won approval for its new 750-bed hospital in Arlington. The location of the Nevius tract near the Virginia end of the Memorial Bridge has many advantages. A hospital there would be within easy commuting distance of downtown Washington. This would be attractive for both patients and visitors. A more important point is that the proximity would enable the Veterans' Administration to avail itself of the medical staffs of Washington hospitals.

Mr. Smith's veto actually serves the purposes of the Arlington real estate group which has sought from the beginning to block acquisition of the Nevius tract in favor of nebulous development plans that have never materialized. Despite Mr. Smith's contention that other sites are available in Arlington which are far less costly than the Nevius tract, no other locations have been found suitable by the Veterans' Administration. In his sudden consideration for economy, Mr. Smith does not mention that the Veterans' Administration already has instituted condemnation proceedings and has spent more than $100,000 on architectural and engineering plans. In any case, selection of a new site would be a lengthy procedure. Meanwhile the principal need, for new hospital facilities as soon as possible, would not be met.

There is some validity to the objection that the spread of Federal buildings to Arlington is discriminatory in that it removes taxable land from the rolls. That factor creates hostility in Arlington, as it has done in voteless Washington, and it is something the Government is going to have to solve as it expands across the Potomac. Representative Smith would appear in a far better light, however, if he were pressing for a Federal payment in lieu of taxes instead of catering to real estate interests at the expense of veterans.

Golden Door

Members of the House Judiciary Subcommittee which has been considering Representative Stratton's bill to admit 400,000 refugees to the United States over a four-year period are now talking about a trip to Europe this summer to see the displaced persons' camps. We do not believe the trip will prove enjoyable even to men as insensitive as Representative Gossett and Senator Revercomb. They will find that the DP camps are no fiction. They will find that the 850,000 men, women and children living in these camps are not statistical abstractions but human beings—human victims of political and religious persecution whose very suffering, as General Eisenhower has observed, gives them a compelling claim upon humanity. It is two years since "liberation" came to them. They hoped that the term embraced something of compassion. We think that members of the United States Congress will not be comfortable in the presence of human beings in whom such hope has died.

Senator Revercomb wants to ignore these people because, he says, "we cannot ignore the existence of a shortage of housing here." Representative Gossett says of the DPs: "Those who can go home should go home. Let the others shift for themselves. They've been pulling our leg long enough." The recollection of that statement should bring a burning sense of shame, at least to Mr. Gossett's colleagues, when they see piteous people who have no homes to go to, no means of shifting for themselves. It will not be easy for those members of the subcommittee who retain any awareness of American traditions to see the Statue of Liberty when they return to the harbor of New York—or to read the inscription at its base: "Give me your tired, your poor, your huddled masses yearning to breathe free, the wretched refugee of your teeming shore, send these, the homeless, tempest-tossed to me; I lift my lamp beside the golden door."

Europa

The first principle in our relations with Russia should be not to make any arrangements in Europe exclusive of Russia. That was Secretary Byrnes' policy; his offer of a 40-year pact for the demilitarization of Germany included Russia. Nonexclusiveness also underlies Secretary Marshall's approach to a continental plan for reconstruction in Europe. This plan would have an open end. Secretary Marshall envisages Europe as "the territory west of Asia," meaning that he includes Russia. And now Undersecretary Will Clayton says he hopes to see Russia in the role of contributor to any scheme of European reconstruction coming out of the present negotiations.

In this respect there is a meeting of minds between the Administration and the British and French governments. Messrs. Bevin and Bidault have asked Mr. Molotov to meet them to discuss Russian participation in outlining what is called in London and Paris a super-Monnet Plan, so-called after Jean Monnet, who evolved a reconstruction plan for France alone. Nobody can foretell what action will be authorized by Moscow. For the last few days the Russians have blanketed Europe with denunciations of the Marshall proposal. We surmise, however, that Molotov will urge the two Foreign Ministers to rely upon the European Commission, which, set up after a long period of Russian objection, sat in Geneva for two weeks, and will reassemble on July 5. We hope that Messrs. Bevin and Bidault will reject any such delaying counsel.

Time is of the essence, and the European Commission, which at the last minute Russia decided to attend when it saw that it could not deter its satellites, has done little save mark time. It is held up by the Russian delegate's attitude of treating most votes on a pro- or anti-Slav basis. In any event the commission is merely a planning body. We don't mean that its services should not be used by the Europeans engaged in preparing data on which the American Government can act. A liaison should certainly be maintained with Geneva. But the operation should be in the hands of small committees of experts on specific committees and industries meeting under the aegis of a central steering committee in close touch with the members' respective governments. The committees should be able to make decisions in the manner of the joint committees which integrated the war effort.

Something like this mode of operation is necessary in the present emergency. A start can be made immediately, as we have hitherto suggested, on a project for Ruhr development. This must be taken out of the hands of our military authorities in Germany without further delay. Coal is the basic element in European recovery. Let the suggested committees agree at once on such a project for submission to either the State Department or the World Bank. Then they could go about the task of drawing up a balance sheet of resources and needs—both in food and raw materials and in equipment for modernization—prior to listing the deficit with Washington. In itself a balance sheet may not make much impression upon America. What would have an impact, we hope and believe, is such an agreement as will make visible the community of Europe. That is to say, the need is a plan calculated to impress Americans that self-help based upon obvious integration of the economies of Europe will be forthcoming.

The momentum that has been generated in Europe by the Marshall suggestion is distinctly encouraging. It must not be arrested by stalling on the part of the Kremlin. Secretary Byrnes could not persuade the British or French to sign a pact on Germany without Russia, and Russia talked it to death. But the British did unite their zone in Germany with America's in spite of a Russian holdout. We are that much nearer to a productive Ruhr. The French may thus be tempted to wait until the Russians make up their minds on the Marshall overture. Hitherto the Russians (not to say the Communists in France) have scared them to such an extent that the Russians have been encouraged to treat Bidault with contumely. But he now has a strength coming from the demand for betterment of conditions by the average Frenchman. If the French allow the Russians to let the present discussions lie at dead center, the last chance might be lost. They should act, and act quickly, with or without Russian participation.

That, as we say, does not mean that anything exclusive of Russia should be envisaged. The way must be kept open for the Russians to join in, and we conjecture that, having failed to obstruct the others, the Russians would enter into the new project rather than risk isolation.

South And Tax Cuts

Of the 35 Democrats in the House who voted with the Republicans to override the President's veto of the tax bill 25 hailed from Southern States that can be counted upon to support the Democratic presidential ticket through thick and thin. Thus it can be said that, with insignificant exceptions, President Truman need fear no unfavorable reactions within the party from his opposition to tax reduction.

It is by no means clear why support for tax reduction should be so strong in the South as to cause a sizable group of House members to break away from the party line in this instance. Southern support of the labor bill is easy to understand, since it reflects local popular sentiment for regulation of unions. But there is no reason to suppose that the case for tax reduction carries any more weight in one section of the country than another at the present time. All sections are prosperous, and there is an absence of evidence that the tax reduction program was an outcome of pressure for tax relief by the people with moderate or low incomes who are typical of the South.

Hence we can only conclude that some Representatives of Northern and Western States voted against tax reduction merely because of a desire to follow the party line, while less disciplined Southerners exercised their privilege of lining up with the opposition, as they so frequently do on specific issues.

Voice In Mothballs

Before the Senate accedes to the plan cooked up by Republican leaders to place the Voice of America on a "stand-by" basis, legislators should consider the full effect of a suspension. There now seems to be a good prospect that the House will end the delay that has prevented a vote on the Mundt bill, which would give our foreign information a sound permanent status. But Senator Taft now has indicated that the Senate will not take up the Mundt bill before adjournment. Instead, Mr. Taft plans to follow Senator Ball's compromise in adding a six-million-dollar item to the State Department appropriation bill instead of the 34 millions asked for implementation of the Mundt bill. Then, the theory goes, if Congress later decides to put the Voice of America on a permanent basis, it can be revived.

This substitute would force an end to most of the valuable information and education activities we are now conducting, and it would permit continued broadcasts only on a greatly constricted basis. It would eliminate the construction of badly needed relay stations. The six-million-dollar appropriation would be sufficient only for the broadcasts which are now done under contract by networks. These comprise only 42 per cent of the whole. The remaining 58 per cent originate with the State Department, and are the programs that are beamed to particularly sensitive areas. To eliminate them would be to eliminate the most important part of the foreign broadcast program.

Audiences are not something that can be packed away in mothballs and then dusted off and restored when Congress feels like it. They are creatures of habit. It is foolish to think that we could eliminate broadcasts to critical areas and then expect to enlist the same listeners if Congress decided to renew the full program sometime in the future. It has taken months of cultivation to build the acceptance our programs now enjoy. The response can be gauged to some degree by the fact that the State Department now receives 25,000 letters a month from foreign listeners. If we were to lop off this audience suddenly, we would lose hard-won good will, and other governments undoubtedly would step in to fill the gap.

Moreover, the State Department would lose irreplaceable skilled personnel. Experts are required to conduct programs in foreign languages. Not only must they be fluent idiomatic conversationalists, but they also must have good radio voices and must be thoroughly screened for loyalty. It required consideration of some 400 experts for the Russian broadcasts to find five who were acceptable. It would be difficult if not impossible to lure such persons back to the Government after one experience with congressional temperament. Another far from negligible factor is that if our broadcast wave lengths were left unused, we might lose them altogether.

The impact on people in other countries of a lapse in our radio broadcasts can be multiplied by the number of other informational activities also at stake. It is an effect which would be devastating at the time that we are spending millions for world projects which are open to misinterpretation by foreign propaganda. Surely the Senate can see the folly of such economy. If the Republican leadership cannot be prevailed upon to reverse its stand, certainly the Foreign Relations Committee ought to do everything within its power to prevent the Mundt bill from being discarded.

MAN BLOWING GRASS

Sunlight ripples on the maples, season is turning, leaves rustle,
scarlet as blood they wave and tremble.
At the tree's feet a man stretches a blade of grass between his thumbs and blows for only his own pleasure.

Brook water runs over the fallen leaves;
it drops sounding in the stone hollows.
The wind moves overhead flowing.
The leaves twist and turn, loosen and drift.

Dying season, do not die,
says the man's whistle.

Birds in a flock
lift from the field; they wheel and turn like quickened breath;
the sunlight scatters from their backs;
the sunlight fires the maple leaves and sinking warms the eyelids of the man, and he blows again.

Dying season,
do not die, says the man's whistle.

Southern Conference

I am white, a native Mississippian, home owner, taxpayer, voter, and a graduate of Mississippi State College. I have never known anyone who is a Communist.

Most certainly I do not approve of the report of the House Committee on Un-American Activities in which it described the Southern Conference for Human Welfare as a Communist-front organization. The committee's evidence appears to be too flimsy and inconclusive. I think it is regrettable that a committee of the great House of Representatives should come out with a smear report of this kind without first giving officials of the Southern Conference an opportunity to testify.

It is not my impression of American justice for any person or organization to be condemned on the basis of one-sided evidence, and that of doubtful significance. I gather the impression that the committee's idea of true Americanism is to be measured directly by one's hate of Russia. Unfortunately the committee is not helping, but hurting, the cause of democracy by such tactics, in my opinion.

Judging by what I know of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, and its leaders, its ideals, practices, ethics and patriotism come closer to representing the kind of America that I vote for than does the vaunting committee which is now casting stones.

Military Training

If John P. Everett (letter published June 14), who is so opposed to universal military training, really wants one example of where such a system kept a country out of war, here it is.

Following the defeat of Napoleon, the Netherlands fixed a regular standing army of regulars. Those drawn by number, namely, half or more of all male sons, served a short stretch, and returned each year for maneuvers. The country had no war between 1815 and 1940, when Hitler invaded the Lowlands.

In 1870, though urged to enter the Franco-Prussian war, the king chose to remain neutral. In March, 1918, when the Germans could have used the nearly 500,000 well-trained Dutch troops, and made all types of overtures to Queen Wilhelmina, she was adamant.

I fancy Mr. Everett doesn't feel that 125 years of peace is a sufficient example. However, he should remember that even though a lightning rod doesn't prevent thunderstorms, some buildings would be in a devil of a shape if they didn't have them. I was in uniform 4 years, 10 months, 23 days. I favor one year's training for young lads.

CHARLES A. GREFE
Washington.

The history of the United States affords a definite example where the possession of strong military power (which is the objective of "universal military training") averted warfare. France took advantage of the preoccupation of this country in the Civil War to launch an assault upon Mexico. That was contrary to our Monroe Doctrine, and should, if we meant business in our enunciation of that doctrine, have been a cause for war. But at the conclusion of the Civil War the country was in possession of a powerful armed force, and we were in position to take extreme action to enforce our announced policy. We stationed formidable forces near the Mexican border; and this obvious threat and show of military strength caused immediate collapse of the French invasion without a hostile shot being fired or warfare with France being precipitated.

Wars that are averted and not fought do not appear in history as do the wars that are fought. Numberless must have been the unrecorded instances where warfare was avoided, or averted, or not entered upon because of hesitancy, or fear, or inability to assail strongly armed nations. Military preparedness is a deterrent and first defense against aggression.

Tax Reduction Veto

In vetoing the Republican-sponsored bill to reduce the people's tax burden, President Truman said, "With the present huge public debt, it is of first importance that every effort now be made to reduce the debt as much as possible." If this be true, then former President Roosevelt's contradicting assertion that "It makes no difference how huge the public debt is—we only owe it to each other," was false.

I agree that the public debt should be reduced. But don't forget that there are two ways to accomplish that objective. President Truman insists it must be done by collecting high taxes, rather than by reducing Federal expenditures. I believe it should be done through reduced spending.

With the war now over for two full years, why should Federal spending be 10 times higher than it was in the 20s and even five times higher than under FDR, who spent plenty? Why should taxes take about 25 per cent of our income when formerly only 5 per cent was sufficient? In other words, why must our Government spend its people's earnings at the rate of more than $4,280,000 every hour throughout the year, and fight tooth and nail against Republican efforts to reduce that enormous expenditure?

Labeling Technique

The following conversation occurred between a patient and myself the other day. I've known this fine, elderly man for many years. He's been steeped in Americanism and Southern heritage for a great number of generations.

Patient: "Do you know that Henry Wallace is speaking tonight?"

Doctor: "Yes. What is your opinion of him?"

Patient: "Well, between you, me and the lamppost, I have to admire him. I don't agree with most of the things he says, but at least he has the courage of his convictions. Of course, I wouldn't be speaking like this down at my Government office. They would call me a Communist if I did."

It is this last sentence which is so disturbing. What is happening to America? D. D. S.

Southern Conference

The action of the House Un-American Activities Committee in denouncing the Southern Conference for Human Welfare as a Communist front strengthens the impression that, in the eyes of the committee, the persons who are un-American and dangerous are essentially those who work to correct social-economic and political abuses in our democracy.

In this case it appears that the real crime of the conference consists of its struggle to raise the Negroes and the white underdogs of the South to a more decent standard of social and political democracy. Certain feudalistic minds don't like it. JOSEPH FACCI.

Taft-Hartley Labor Bill

The chief arguments for the Taft-Hartley bill have been that it is a "mild" bill, that it is a "fair" bill which does no more than correct an "unbalance" in Federal labor law, and that it will enable management and labor to settle their problems with a minimum of governmental legislation.

I do not think any of these arguments bear analysis. It is my judgment, based on careful study and on long and specialized experience, that the bill represents the most violent and most vindictive attack on labor in modern Anglo-Saxon legal and legislative history.

Senator Ives has become the chief spokesman of those who say that this is a "mild" bill. But is it accurate to call a bill "mild" which: (1) deprives millions of union members of the closed shop and which permits the union shop only upon such restrictive conditions that the conditions practically destroy the apparent grant; (2) interferes with free collective bargaining by forbidding bargaining altogether on some subjects, by restricting bargaining on others, and by setting such rigid notice and time-table standards in negotiations as to make the bargaining process a battle of wits with serious penalties imposed on the loser; (3) under the guise of dealing with featherbedding and jurisdictional and secondary strikes, contains provisions which disarm unions in resisting employer aggression on their standards and on their very existence; (4) pointedly discourages the use of arbitration as a means of settling disputes and which, instead, invites heavy damage suits against unions; and (5) makes it a crime for a union to use its own paper merely to register the record of a candidate for federal office?

In addition, this bill destroys the Norris-LaGuardia Act by authorizing injunctions in countless situations. It also tears apart the Wagner Act and then fashions it into an instrument for the minute regulation and drastic punishment of unions and their members.

The bill severely limits the right to strike and to picket. What "unbalance" does this correct? Unions may not use their periodicals to express their opinions concerning candidates for Federal office. What "unbalance" does this correct, especially when one considers the enormous power of the commercial press?

Consider what happens if there is a failure to give the 60-day notice of a desire to terminate or modify an agreement. If it is the employer who fails to give the notice and then engages in a lockout, he is eventually ordered to cease and desist; there is no further penalty. If it is the union which fails to give the notice and then engages in a strike, the employes lose their status as employes.

Many of the inequities of this bill are concealed in strange places. Thus, by virtue of the present definition of "employer" in the Wagner Act, employer associations and so-called "citizens' committees" are subject to cease and desist orders when they act "in the interest" of employers. The bill changes the definition so that such groups may be reached only if they act as "agents" of employers. As National Labor Relations Board and court decisions have shown, employer associations and other antilabor community groups have often been used to wield powerful weapons against labor.

Small Manufacturers

UNDER THE SHADOW of the giants of big business and the giants of big labor, the small-business man is wondering what his future may be. That is true in particular of the manufacturer who competes in a small way with one of the giants.

The other day the Committee for Economic Development put out a detailed program of reform in finance intended to help small business meet the competition of big business. This organization of conscientious businessmen is now preparing a similar program for tax reform.

Industry-wide collective bargaining which sets an industry-wide wage pattern is a source of worry to the executives of smaller corporations. I have just had an interesting series of letters from a manufacturer in an Eastern city who expressed what is plainly a real fear that uniform wage demands on the giant corporation and on the smaller manufacturer will promote giantism and the growth of monopoly. He writes:

"In this city there are 15 or 20 manufacturers who employ anywhere from 100 to 1000 employes each, and these employes are members of the United Steel Workers Union. Some of these companies—a few—are reasonably prosperous. Many of them are not prosperous and are what might be termed marginal mills.

"Most of them are engaged in activities which bear no relationship whatever to basic steel fabrication. Their competition lies in entirely different fields. If they are to be subject to decisions made in Pittsburgh, in negotiations between the United States Steel Corp. and Philip Murray, many of them are going to be hurt. Obviously the weakest will fold first, which means unemployment and the loss of production."

THIS SEEMED to me a powerful point. In a reply, however, I asked the manufacturer whether it was not true that the pattern of monopoly prices in the steel industry had not worked to eliminate the small business long before the labor monopoly came into being. In his fair and judicious reply he said:

"The reason for the existence of large basic corporations is not generally due to monopolistic squeezes; on the contrary, it is because the technologies involved require large capital. There are exceptions, and where exceptions exist, the Government should step in—witness aluminum.

"Nevertheless, the very monopolistic conditions which you deplore are accentuated by industry-wide bargaining. What recourse does a little 800-man company like ours have, when it is faced with demands from Pittsburgh, other than to combine with other companies under similar pressure in order to protect what we have? And our jobs, from president on down to our sweepers, depend on that protection . . ."

"TODAY THE men and women in our little company are satisfied. We are paying liberal wages, equal or above the area. Nevertheless, they have been told by their United Steel Workers organizer, who gets his orders from Pittsburgh, that he—not they—will tell us what we are to do. And he tells us that we are to increase our wages by the same amount that basic steel has granted. What relationship is there between basic steel and lock-making?

"In the face of a very large loss last year and an acute financial condition today, he demands an increase of approximately $150,000 in the annual payroll. Would you, or could you, if you were the manager of this business, order a price decrease? And yet our products—locks for dwellings and other buildings—are selling at prices far in excess of what we consider reasonable . . ."

A ban on industry-wide bargaining was included in the labor bill passed by the House. In the Senate, at the insistence of moderates such as Senator Irving Ives of New York, this was eliminated. In the final draft, language was inserted in the bill providing that when a national emergency grows out of a strike, the unions must consider, in polling their membership, the last wage offer of "each employer" and not the industry as a whole. Some experts believe this could be interpreted to forbid industry-wide bargaining in most industries.

There are evils in industry-wide bargaining, with the small manufacturer taking the rap. But whether these evils can be cured by law is certainly open to doubt.

United Nations Day

Nearly two years have passed since the signing of the U. N. Charter and despite the pessimism, even in high places, the world, through United Nations, is progressing slowly but surely toward unbreakable bonds of unity.

It would seem fitting, therefore, to take special note of the birthday anniversary of the United Nations, June 26 of each year, setting it apart for observance as a world-wide holiday, giving the world pause for reflection on the work of United Nations.

It would be a fitting Remembrance Day—a day of thanksgiving for peace and to keep in thankful remembrance the sacrifices of the multitudes that the scourge of war may never return. In recognition of peace treaty formalities made, or yet to be concluded, it could be a general peace treaty day and as an everlasting reminder of the goal of the United Nations—to abolish war and protect peace—an all inclusive World Peace Day.

Unification

A Communication

FOR THE three years during which unification has been before the public eye, it has puzzled me to hear the same objections continually raised against the proposal in spite of the fact that the objections have all been progressively removed. The source of the objections has been predominantly naval officers and although the Navy Department is completely in accord with the proposal now under Senate consideration, one hears continued objections by senior naval officers.

The Army, which would suffer the most tangible loss from unification—the entire Air Forces—has made no plea for its special protection; instead the Army has been among the staunchest proponents of unification and has repeatedly voiced an eagerness to yield whatever special position it may have today under the War Department to the judgment of a single Secretary in the common interest of the country. Of course, the Air Forces have had no objections because they were realising a long awaited and much deserved position of parity for air power with land and sea power.

A good many objectors to unification have overlooked the fundamental purposes of unification as a measure to provide that balanced security structure so essential to the successful waging of modern warfare. It would seem that if elements involved in the existing relationship are justifiable and necessary to the national security, there is no need to fear that an objective security of the over-all security structure by a Secretary of National Security would result in harming these elements.

Such objectors have overlooked the fact that the unification bill now before the Senate is as much a matter of rearranging the civilian departments and agencies concerned with national defense as it is a question of radical reorganization of the armed services. And even if changes in the armed services did eventually result, what possible differences does that make if the country in the long run is the gainer?

LET ME briefly list what I think are the real reasons for unification:

1. The total nature of modern war and the rapidity with which it could strike the United States require the integrating of our plans and preparations on an all-out national basis which is possible only with unification.

2. There is no sound and comprehensive way to determine what constitutes a balanced and adequate armed forces structure or to plan for the employment of such forces without unification.

3. Although a prime lesson of World War II has been that military policies are inseparable from our foreign policies and our national life, military policy cannot be brought into harmony with the rest of our national scheme without unification.

4. The military and civilian requirements for men and materials to execute and support a major war in the future are tremendous, and in fact require a total mobilization of the Nation; however, these great demands cannot be balanced against the capabilities of the natural, industrial, material, and human resources of the country to meet these requirements without unification.

5. There are numerous uneconomical conditions, and consequently undue expense to the American people, in a system of national security wherein two autonomous, separate and uncoordinated governmental departments are each charged with the single general mission of national security; and yet these conditions cannot be eliminated without unification.

THE POINT has been made by Admiral Zacharias, (communications published May 27 and June 16) and others that naval officers almost unanimously are still opposed to unification. I am dubious of this contention. The basis for my doubt is that there are very few people in the armed services who really understand what unification is supposed to do or who know what the issues are if called for an opinion on it.

I am startled by the implication in Admiral Zacharias' two recent letters to The Post to the effect that it is either practicable or proper for decisions affecting a military arm to be reached by the majority vote of all its members. Armies and navies can be successful—as ours have been with eminence—only through discipline, and under the command and direction of their responsible leaders.

After three years of extensive and exhaustive study by all responsible persons to whom the matter is of concern, an acceptable proposal (S-758) has been drafted by the Senate. This measure is indeed the result of compromise, but so is virtually every law on our statute books. Contrary to the distaste this causes Admiral Zacharias, I applaud the manner of the bill's development.

THAT THE Joint Chiefs of Staff did a splendid job in their conduct of World War II, no one will deny. On the other hand, many, including some members of the wartime JCS, will admit that under a better organization the Joint Chiefs could have been much more effective. The weakness was not in the JCS itself, but in not having an effective JCS in operation during peacetime so that it might have been ready to fight World War II at the outset.

General Marshall, a wartime member of the JCS, had this to say about the effectiveness of that body in 1945. "Even under the stress of war agreement has been reached in the JCS at times only by numerous compromises and after long delays, and coordination in material and administrative matters has largely been forced by circumstances arising out of the war, and then only incompletely . . . With the end of the war there is no longer a compelling necessity to reach at least compromise agreements on major matters."

Secretary of War Patterson pulled no punches himself when he informed a Senate committee this spring that war planning by the armed services is dangerously incomplete because of failure to agree on the part of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and lack of an individual such as the Secretary of National Security to force agreement in cases where impasses develop. That in a nutshell is how the JCS situation appears today.

ADMIRAL Zacharias has also expressed a fear that a Secretary of National Security might lean toward one branch of a service more than another. This shallow fear was discounted emphatically by Secretaries Forrestal and Patterson and Admiral Nimitz and General Eisenhower when they recently testified on the unification bill. These men also pointed out that no drastic change could be made by this Secretary without approval of the Congress and the President.

AS TO THE fear of undue military influence in the country, the military in the United States has always been subordinate to civilian control.

This bill just about doubles the present amount of civilian control over the military in this country.

Let it be clearly understood that the proposed unification legislation makes specific, repeated and unusual "safeguards" for the Marine Corps and naval aviation. Although I have never been able to understand the apparently deliberate campaign to make the country think that this bill would harm those great components of our armed forces, I am glad that the present bill is now entirely satisfactory to the Commandant of the Marine Corps and the Deputy Chief of Naval Operations for Air.

AS TO amphibious operations, Admiral Zacharias has made a point which I believe the record will modify. Having had considerable experience in amphibious warfare myself, I bow to no man in my respect for the Marines; but to give the Marines full credit for the development of amphibious methods seems to me a distortion of the truth.

Any presumption that amphibious operations are peculiar to naval campaigns and the Marines alone is of course erroneous. As far as the Army is concerned amphibious landings are only incidental to further and more extensive operations inland. Nevertheless, the Army has played a dominant part in amphibious warfare, as is evidenced by the record of World War II which relates that the Army undertook the development of its own amphibious methods, the training of a large proportion of its amphibious troops, and actual assaults of division or larger size in 42 instances. The Marines made 15 such assaults.

It was the combined effort of all branches of the service working as a team and not the superior achievement of any one shining alone that brought us our superb results.

I am sorry that this unification measure still meets opposition. Surely if, as is the case, accord has been reached on the major issues by those officials responsible for the national security, there should be no further delay or obstruction in getting the law passed. It would seem that further opposition to unification can only be to protect some interest which might be interfered with when under unification that interest might have to be subordinated to the national welfare. I am sure that no such selfish interest motivates Admiral Zacharias, and so as his comrade in arms, I say "Let's get on with the national welfare!"

First Step In European Plan

MR. HAROLD E. STASSEN, in an address he made at Swarthmore College this week, adds a powerful voice to the increasing education of the American public about the impending crisis in Europe, and its menace to America. As a Republican presidential aspirant with an impressive following, Mr. Stassen made an important contribution to bi-partisan support of the Truman doctrine for action in face of the crisis.

Sullivan

The Truman doctrine, as carried forward and made concrete by what is occasionally referred to as the "Marshall doctrine," calls for cooperative planning by the nations of Europe to make the economy of that continent an integrated whole, so that the assistance we can make available will be most effectively used. As put tersely by Undersecretary Dean Acheson, "the achievement of a coordinated European economy [is] a fundamental objective of our foreign policy."

To this Mr. Stassen assents strongly, as a thing basic and imperative. But Mr. Stassen adds a contribution of his own. He is concerned lest there be some feeling that "we should wait for the nations of Europe to present a joint plan of needs." Such a feeling Mr. Stassen regards as very dangerous. In the spirit of facing an emergency, he warned "that if we sit back and wait for the nations of Europe to agree upon a plan, we will wait too long. The entire deteriorating economy system in Europe cries for speed."

WHAT Mr. Stassen said is well known in Washington. All the agencies of our Government whose official responsibilities concern them with Europe are aghast with the desperate need for speed on our part. An example and cause is lack of sufficient coal production in Europe. Lack of coal affects production of fertilizer, and lack of fertilizer means that the production of food is very much below enough. The result of these things is a strain on the entire economy of Europe, tense to the point of unbearable.

And the strain is not only economic. Our Government is extremely concerned with the danger of political upheavals in France and Italy before we are able to bolster their economies. The Communists in both countries have determinedly obstructed their governments, have put obstacle after obstacle in the way of reconstruction. Communist overthrow of these governments would mean turning of Europe over to Russia.

Knowing this, and recognizing how important coal is to the solution of Europe's problems, Mr. Stassen makes a constructive proposal for immediate action. The great coal center of Europe is the German Ruhr Valley. With the Ruhr in production, Europe was self-sufficient as to coal. Since the war the Ruhr has not reached 40 per cent of its old effectiveness. In May we sent 427 shiploads of coal to Europe, while before the war we would not have sent one. These ships carried 3,800,000 tons of coal for which European countries had to pay the extravagantly inflated American price of $20 a ton.

MR. STASSEN says: "We must act on the problem of the Ruhr without delay and without waiting." He pointed out that "action in the Ruhr does not require the previous agreement of all the countries of Europe. Action in the Ruhr does not require any new agreements, or concessions or accords from Russia." We and the British control the Ruhr and could act immediately to set up any system that we wish in the Ruhr. Mr. Stassen was very clear that in setting up the Ruhr again it be done on a basis of private ownership "without socialization."

What Mr. Stassen says about coal specifically and more generally about the great need for speed in our actions about Europe is an addition to the evolving foreign policy of which the Truman doctrine is the beginning and base. The Truman doctrine as carried forward and made concrete by Secretary of State Marshall holds that the European nations should get together, pool their resources, and consider their economic problems from the over-all point of view of Europe, while at the same time we study the problems from the point of view of our own resources. To this Mr. Stassen's addition is that an immediate and practicable step be taken which does not need to wait until the Truman doctrine functions.

Mr. Stassen's proposal, in addition to being a practicable step in an immediate emergency, is a help toward recognition of a fundamental condition. The great error of the two postwar years has been pursuit of practices which restricted production in Europe, mainly because Russia would not assent to agreements that would make restored production possible. The largest corrective and the most dependable defense against the impending crisis, is restored production.

Matter Of Fact

Challenge In Greece

THERE HAS BEEN a general tendency to assume that with the passage of the Greek aid bill, the Greek crisis has been surmounted. In fact, American policy makers are increasingly disturbed by the rapid political deterioration in that key country.

Mark F. Ethridge, able chief of the American delegation to the United Nations Balkan Commission, recently reported directly to Secretary of State George C. Marshall on the Greek situation. Marshall began the detailed conversation between the two men by asking flatly what were the chances of success for the American effort in Greece. Ethridge is understood to have replied somewhat bleakly that he judged the American program would have about a 55 per cent chance of success.

This somber estimate of the slim odds in favor of one of the most critical aspects of American foreign policy is borne out by other reports from Greece. The Communist-controlled guerillas have intensified their drive since the American decision to intervene in Greece was taken. The efforts of the unreliable Greek army to contain the guerillas have been singularly unsuccessful. Intelligence reports now indicate that the guerillas control a full third of the total Greek territory, including the whole mountain range which cuts down like a knife between the main Greek cities, Athens and Salonika.

There is real alarm in the State Department that this area may soon be further extended in accordance with a planned, Soviet-backed offensive. For, given determined support from the Soviet satellites to the north, there is good reason to believe that the guerillas might well succeed in investing Salonika. There is no doubt at all that on a given signal the Communists are capable of beginning a campaign of chaos in Athens and other areas under Greek government control, timed to coincide with heavy pressure by Yugoslavia on northern Macedonia, which Tito has already demanded.

IF THIS happens, Dwight Griswold, newly appointed chief of the American mission in Greece, will step ashore in the midst of a full-scale civil war. He will have no choice but to abandon all hope of soon reviving the shattered Greek economy. He, and the makers of American policy, will be faced with a crucial decision: whether passively to support the weak Greek army in the hope that it may be able to deal with the situation, or to involve the United States actively and directly in a full-scale civil war close to the Soviet borders.

It is for this reason that the Soviet action in the Security Council, which will be meeting next week in New York, is awaited in the State Department with the most acute anxiety. For in the opinion of the experts an accurate idea of the future Greek situation may be gathered from the Soviet decision whether to pass or to veto the American proposal for dealing with the Greek problem. This is true because the Greek future depends on whether the Soviets are determined to press on with their offensive.

The American proposal, sponsored by Mark Ethridge and backed by all the members of the Balkan Commission except the Soviet Union and Poland, provides for a permanent United Nations Border Commission in Greece, with wide powers to prevent the Russian satellites, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Albania, from supporting the Greek Communist guerillas.

THERE IS, of course, little hope that the Soviets will vote for the Ethridge plan, yet if they abstain from voting, the inference can then be fairly drawn that they have at least temporarily resigned themselves to the loss of Greece as a Soviet province. In that case, Griswold can get on with his immensely difficult job, with at least a reasonable chance of ultimate success.

On the other hand, if the Soviets interpose their veto, this will be taken to mean an all-out, ruthless drive to add Greece to the Soviet Balkan empire, by means of the Greek guerillas, supported by the Soviet satellites. There is thought to be a fair chance that the Soviets will abstain when the Balkan Commission report comes up for a vote in New York. It must certainly be clear to the Soviets that the policy implied by a veto—open political warfare between the Soviet Union and the United States in Greece—involves terrible dangers. Yet it may be that the rulers in the Kremlin will decide that the game is worth the candle.

It is thus not difficult to understand why Ethridge gave first priority in his report to Marshall to the establishment of a really effective border commission to seal off the northern Greek border against the Soviet-supported drive. Second priority he gave to the elimination of the guerilla forces, by means of an American-guaranteed amnesty supported by a tough alternative policy. Only after these two preliminary objectives are accomplished can the main objective of American policy in Greece—the establishment of real economic and political stability—stand a chance of success.

Ethridge's report to Secretary Marshall and the State Department policy makers serves to underline a fact which it will be well to bear in mind during the coming months. The rapidly developing American policy in the face of Soviet political imperialism is not only a question of dollars. It is also a question of a sustained, level-headed determination to do what must be done, hell or high water. Only before this kind of determination will the Soviet Union in the last analysis, begin to give ground.

The Gallup Poll

Tax Bill Veto in Line With Public Sentiment

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., June 19.—President Truman's tax bill veto was closely in line with majority public sentiment throughout the country as expressed in public opinion surveys dating as far back as last year's election campaign.

The majority of voters have felt that if it came to a choice between cutting taxes and cutting some of the public debt, the latter should take preference.

Obviously, nobody enjoys paying high taxes. And nearly two voters out of every five feel that taxes should be reduced regardless of what happens to the public debt. But most of the rest express greater fear of the huge mountain of public debt than of the heavy burden of taxation which they have to carry.

This issue was put to the public as early as last October, before the Republicans captured control of Congress in the 1946 election. At that time, before any concerted drive had been launched in Congress to cut taxes, the weight of sentiment was more in favor of debt reduction than tax reduction.

Then came a long blast of publicity about tax cutting, with Republican leaders advocating substantial cuts. While it might have been expected that this would increase public sentiment for tax reduction, actually the movement of public opinion was in the opposite direction. As the discussion continued there was a drop in the number of voters favoring tax reduction in preference to debt reduction.

In October just before the 1946 congressional elections the country's attitude was as follows:

Should the Congress elected in November reduce income taxes in 1947, or should this wait until some of the national debt has been paid off?

The vote:

Reduce taxes	41%
Wait	49
No opinion	10

In May of this year the issue was again put to the voters in a question which named the specific surplus involved.

The United States today has a billion dollar surplus in its running expenses. Should this money be used to reduce income taxes, or should it be used to reduce the national debt?

As reported May 30 the vote was:

Cut taxes	38%
Reduce debt	53

* * * *

The typical American has raised few objetcions to high taxes when he felt the need was clear.

When war broke out in Europe in 1939 and our own outlays for defense began to mount, polls found the Nation's voters saying they were willing to pay more in taxes. In fact, the public was ahead of the Government, in the sense that its own ideas about what it should be taxed were stiffer than what the Government proposed. The majority of Americans recognized that they would have to carry a heavier burden and were more than willing to do their share.

At the same time, there was no sentiment among the general public for "soaking the rich." When asked what income tax a man earning $20,000 or $50,000 annually be required to pay, the public named a rate much lower than the Government was already requiring people with such incomes to pay in taxes.

New evidence that the general public is not out to "soak the rich" is contained in a survey just completed. This shows that the majority of voters believe the amount of income tax for persons with large incomes should be limited to 50 per cent. In short, no one in the United States should be required to pay more than half of his income to the Federal Government, in the opinion of the majority.

The present tax rates go up to more than 80 per cent.

Kluttz

SQUEEZE: A combination of congressional inactivity and civil service rules now threaten to squeeze hundreds of temporary and war service people out of their jobs. The complex situation has a score of personnel directors biting their fingernails. This is it:

Thousands of employes have been given provisional dismissal notices on the basis of budget cuts made by the House. Many hope to have them canceled before they become effective by June 30.

But their hope is based on larger Senate appropriations, which would be approved by the House. It's now reasonably certain that no major money bill will be law by the June 30 deadline. Also, that most employes on provisional notice will be cut from the rolls and be paid their terminal leave.

However, most agencies are now planning to reissue notices to career employes to extend the effective date to July 31. This will be done if the Senate approves the House rider which would permit payment of terminal leave out of 1947 funds in the month of July.

To repeat, the temporary and war service people will be severed from the rolls. But if the Senate, and Congress eventually, restores all or part of the House cuts—war service and temporaries won't automatically be called back to their jobs. And those who are will be penalized. Here's why:

Civil Service revealed yesterday that it will give surplus career people the first opportunity for these jobs. Only in those cases where no laid-off career employe is qualified will the agency be permitted to rehire the war service or temporary worker.

But the employ who is cut off and then called back will take it on the chin financially. A big wad of Federal taxes will come out of his lump sum terminal leave payment. But when he's rehired, he'll have to return most of the lump sum, plus his withheld taxes.

FHA: Civil Service has made an exception for Farmers' Home Administration which has made a provisional lay-off of more than 3000 employes. An order was issued last month bringing all FHA jobs under Civil Service as of July 14. People in most of the uncovered jobs had been waiting for status for years.

Now Civil Service has decreed that any FHA employe who is in line for status on July 14 but who is fired before that date can be called back to work and be given permanent status if Congress gives the agency additional money. But Civil Service turned down FHA on its proposal that these employes be given permanent status anyway and the right to transfer to other agencies.

WAR SERVICE: Of course, many war service people are in a similar fix. They have taken competitive tests and are awaiting certification to their jobs as permanents. Then they are fired. However, Civil Service promises to give prior claim to this group as they are certified.

PERMANENTS: The actual termination date for permanents—whether it's this or next month—won't make too much difference to employes in this group. Civil Service officials say it should be plainly understood that any fired career employe must be given preferred reinstatement rights for one year in the agency that dismisses him. The commission promises him the first crack at vacancies.

ATTORNEYS: Civil Service has withdrawn its proposed regulation to "advise" agencies on attorney dismissals. As it now stands, it's strictly up to the agencies to decide how attorneys are to be fired. Civil Service says their hands are tied since all legal jobs are now outside the Civil Service system by law.

In some War Department offices, for example, war service attorneys are placed in Group A, the career group, and lawyers who acquired status before the law was enacted are being dismissed before the war service group. The method used to give notices to Agriculture lawyers also has brought bitter protests. Civil Service says it's helpless to act.

RETIREMENT: The cost angle has the Langer-Chavez-Stevenson bill stymied again. The House Civil Service Committee will meet again today on it. A two-hour meeting yesterday failed to produce an agreement. Several members demanded more information on the bill's cost before they would agree to vote.

Admittedly, the cost angle is complicated and confusing. Civil Service officials say it would cost the Government nothing, but the employes would pay in $50,000,000 additional by increasing their contribution from 5 to 6 per cent. A member of the board of actuaries agreed, but this board muddied the waters by first claiming the bill would cost the Government $105,000,000 annually.

Chest X-Ray Survey Funds Asked on Hill

Dr. Ramsey Calls On House Group To Approve $66,900 Appropriation

Congress was urged yesterday to spend $66,900 in District money for a city-wide TB case finding survey.

Dr. Herbert P. Ramsey, executive committee member and former president of the Washington Metropolitan Health Council, made the appeal for the chest X-ray survey money to the House District Appropriations Subcommittee in open hearings on the District budget.

Dr. Ramsey pointed out the proposed survey plan calls for the District government to share expenses with the United States Public Health Service, which would pay $88,000, and the District Tuberculosis Association, to pay $33,400.

Invites Discussion

Subcommittee Member Ralph E. Church (R., Ill.) said:

"We're trying to save dollars where we can."

He invited Ramsey to discuss the proposal further with him.

Ramsey declared the District is spending 4½ million dollars a year for TB care.

"We don't want to spend that the rest of our lives," he said. "We want to get ahead of the ball."

Hospital Sells Securities

Commissioner Guy Mason has said he would favor a survey if facilities were available to care for the cases to be found. With the present lack of facilities, he has opposed the survey.

The subcommittee also heard Wilson B. Nairn, president of the board of Children's Hospital, tell how the hospital had sold the last of its securities to meet expenses during the past year.

He said he had advised the Commisisoners $190,000 would be needed for the District to pay its share of the hospital's cost of caring for indigent children, instead of the $90,000 first proposed by health and budget officials.

Hearings will continue at 10 a. m. today.

Bill Expands Powers

Insurance companies here would be given authority to expand their field of investments, according to a bill approved by a Senate District Subcommittee yesterday.

The subcommittee, headed by Senator C. Douglass Buck (R., Del.), also approved two other insurance measures, both of which have already passed the House.

One of these bills would permit life insurance companies to use modern mortality tables for policies issued in the District. Present tables, based on 1868 statistics, have been modernized in all but three States.

The second measure assures life insurance policyholders that their estates will receive benefits of the policy, in the event that the beneficiary named in the policy dies before the policyholder.

Appearing before the subcommittee to urge approval of the legislation were Albert F. Jordan, District insurance commissioner, and three officials of Acacia Mutual, Howard Kacy, Lloyd C. Crippen and C. B. Hurd.

Lieut. Silvea's Promotion Is Approved

Promotion of Police Lieut. James E. Silvea of the Eleventh Precinct to the rank of captain was approved yesterday by the District Commissioners.

Silvea

Silvea's promotion will take effect on July 1 upon the retirement of Capt. John Flaherty, commanding officer of the Fifth Precinct. Silvea's assignment has not yet been announced.

Appointed to the force July 1, 1925, Silvea was promoted to mendations, including one in 1935 Except for one month at the First Precinct he has served at the Eleventh Precinct since his promotion to lieutenant in June, 1940.

His record shows three commendations, includig one in 1935 for participation in the round-up and arrest of four men wanted for 45 cases of robbery, housebreaking and larceny.

A native of Lexington, Va., Silvea came to Washington in 1925 after three years in the Marine Corps, having served at Parris Island, Norfolk and Quantico, Va., the West Indies and the Virgin Islands. Within three weeks of his discharge from the service he joined the police force here.

Married to the former Edith Hall, the 46-year-old lieutenant lives at 1724 40th st. se., has four children, Mrs. Barbara Bendetti, James, Daniel and Betty Silvea.

Held for Grand Jury

A coroner's jury yesterday ordered Leroy Marshall, 49, of 1843 7th st. nw., held for action of the grand jury in connection with the bat death of Jesse Holcomb, 63, of 436 S st. nw. Police said the two men were fighting on June 14 shortly before Holcomb was found unconscious on a vacant lot, in the 1700 block of Marion ct. nw. Holcomb died Monday at Freedmen's Hospital of head injuries.

Orchestra Plays at Watergate

Handel-Harty: Royal Fireworks Music; Strauss: Emperor waltzes, Stix: Spielerei; von Suppe: Fatinitza Overture; Hanson: Second movement, Nordic Symphony; McDonald: Rhumba; Wagner: Rienzi, Overture; lyrics and songs, National Symphony Orchestra, Richard Bales, conductor; Mona Paulee, soloist. Watergate, Thursday evening.

By Paul Hume

To the accompaniment of sunset fireworks, Handel's Royal Fireworks Suite opened the eleventh season of Watergate concerts by the National Symphony Orchestra last night. Richard Bales, musical director of the series, directed.

Bales

Four airplanes chose to add their voices to the more mellifluous notes of the players, in what we must hope will be a maximum of aerial visits. The program was drawn from the lighter side of things, as if to imply that in summer one cannot stomach anything longer than fifteen minutes. This will be varied in later concerts for the good of all.

The orchestra, which has just returned from a festival of concerts at the University of Virginia in Charlottesville, was in good form and played with fine tone and beautiful balance. New members abound in the ensemble, and their presence, together with that of Jan Tomasow and Howard Mitchell leading the string desks, assures us of the best summer playing we have yet had.

As the evening wore on, one realized that there had been no excitement during the program, which, in view of the nature of the works, was a disappointment. Everything was played properly, but nothing seemed to fire either musicians or listeners.

Mona Paulee, mezzo-soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, drew upon the most hackneyed items of her repertoire. This was a great shame, for she is a singer of fine gifts, a strikingly rich voice, and flawless, even exaggeratedly clear diction. Her work was completely unspirited, except for a well-schooled performance of Santuzza's aria from Cavalleria Rusticana. The audience found the thrilling sounds she produced sufficient inducement to importune two encores. By so doing they heard the one unusual song of the evening, Rimsky-Korsakoff's The Rose and the Nightingale, which was effectively colored.

Federal Agency For Handicapped Asked by Madden

Establishment of a Government department devoted to the interests of the physically handicapped was suggested last night by Representative Ray J. Madden (D., Ind.).

Madden was among speakers at a meeting held under the sponsorship of the American Federation of the Physically Handicapped in the National Press Club

The Indiana Congressman said that he believed Congress would provide such a department for the more than eight million physically handicapped in this country

Robert C. Goodwin, who received an ovation when AFPH President Paul Strachan introduced him as the director of an agency (the United States Employment Service) which has placed more than 1,300,000 handicapped persons in jobs, stressed that the employer must be made to realize that the handicapped person is worth his hire.

Fulbright Urges U. S. Of Europe

Federation Could Stop Communism, Teachers College Graduates Are Told

Senator J. W. Fulbright (D., Ark.) last night expressed belief that a federation of European countries could serve as a stopgap measure against the spread of communism.

He said such a federation could make Russia devote itself toward development of its own country rather than to the spreading of its doctrine.

He predicted also that if all of Europe should fall under communistic dominance, this country could not remain at peace.

Addresses Wilson Graduates

Senator Fulbright spoke before 33 graduates of Wilson Teachers College and an audience of 650 at exercises in Woodrow Wilson High School.

Earlier yesterday, 89 men and women were graduated from Miner Teachers College at ceremonies in Armstrong High School.

Senator Fulbright, a former Rhodes scholar, said that if the United States continues to pour financial aid into Europe in piecemeal fashion, he is afraid that we will eventually drop the task as impractical.

Senator Fulbright said that if, however, Europe should federate, the United States could treat it as an economic and political unity and thereby help European countries to a self-supporting basis.

He placed hope in the United Nations as the first step in the evolution of a world-wide system of laws.

At Miner Teachers College exercises, Dr. Horace Mann Bond, president of Lincoln University, Pa., said the aim of teachers should be "to produce a people sensitive to freedom and the challenge of human destiny.

"You and yours are not altogether free," he said. "This gives you a peculiar advantage, for the word freedom is as pregnant with meaning as it was to Thomas Jefferson and the signers of the Declaration of Independence."

16 Veterans Graduated

Among the graduates were 16 veterans whose studies were interrupted by the war. Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, conferred the degrees and presented diplomas.

Two hundred and eighty-one students received diplomas last night in exercises at Calvin Coolidge High School. The commencement was the last to be held in the city's public senior and junior high schools. In nearby Maryland 139 students were graduated from the Bladensburg High School and 135 from the Maryland Park High School.

DEATH WAS CLOSE—A boy's express wagon, overturned and dented, marks the spot where 7-year-old Kermit Jones of 835 3d st. sw., escaped possible death and serious injury yesterday. He was struck by a District refuse department truck as he crossed 3d st. in the middle of the block. Police say the child darted from between parked cars. Playmates and neighbors of the boy stand in silence at the scene after he was taken to Casualty Hospital with a fractured ankle

County Orders Silver Spring Traffic Survey

Bottleneck Feared By Closing 2 Streets For Auto Parking Lot

A survey of traffic conditions around a proposed public parking lot in Silver Spring, Md., was ordered yesterday by the Montgomery County commissioners.

The commissioners inspected the site with County Supervisor Irving G. McNayr, County Engineer Douglas Riggs, Hecht Co. officials and representatives of the Silver Spring Board of Trade.

The proposed parking lot at the intersection of Ellsworth dr. and Fenton st., would accommodate 600 automobiles and involve closing of two streets.

Resulting rerouting of traffic might create a bottleneck, officials said, so the commissioners ordered the hiring of an expert to study the problem.

The lot is one of several recommended by Andrew J. Kessinger, chairman of the Silver Spring off-street parking lot purchasing committee.

Kessinger's committee has been authorized to proceed with the purchase or condemnation, if need be.

County Supervisor McNayr said it was estimated the 800,000 feet of land needed for the lot situated near the new Hecht Co. store would cost in the neighborhood of $100,000.

Navy Lists Reservist Billets

Training billets aboard ships of the fleet and at specialist schools ashore are available to Washington Naval Reservists this summer, the Potomac River Naval Command anounced yesterday.

First choice in assigning billets is given to members of the organized reserve, but any unfilled berths are open to volunteer reservists. Starting Sunday, training ships will leave Norfolk each Sunday until mid-September for two-week cruises. Berths are available for four men and four officers on each cruise.

A special two-week amphibious training cruise will leave Little Creek, Va., July 13, and touch at New York for weekend liberty ashore. Washington's tentative quota for this cruise is five officers and 20 enlisted men.

Further information may be obtained by those interested from the director, Naval Reserve, Potomac River Naval Command, at the Naval Gun Factory, M and 8th sts. se.

Thirty University of Virginia students are among 1258 sophomore students of the Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps scheduled to arrive at the United States Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md., today preparatory to embarking in two heavy cruisers for a seven-week cruise in the western Atlantic and Caribbean.

Barber Shop Gets Once Over Lightly

The Army and Navy Joint Disciplinary Board held a hearing yesterday to determine if the Esquire Barber Shop, 1204 New York ave. nw., should be declared out of bounds for servicemen.

Servicemen have complained of charges of $5 to $20 for haircuts, shaves, and other services, according to Lieut. Comdr. M. J. McIntire of the Shore Patrol.

The Board will act today, McIntire said.

The hearing was closed to the press at the request of Myer Koonin, attorney for the proprietor Pat Fiordelise.

Fiordelise has declared that all prices for massages, skin treatments, scalp treatments, etc., are listed in inch-square print at eye level.

He said the men are always asked if they want the treatments before they get them. Most of the men ask for "the works" and forget to add up the price until the treatments have been given, he said.

Woman Is Held In Stabbing of Army Sergeant

Army Sergt. Emil P. Kish, 43, was found stabbed in the doorway of 629 E st. nw. early yesterday.

He was reported in "good" condition last night at Walter Reed General Hospital with a wound in the left chest.

Police arrested a woman who lives at the E st. address. Charged with assault with a dangerous weapon, she was identified by police as Ruth Cambliss, 42, with a record of five previous arrests, including operation of a disorderly house.

Sergeant Kish had been recently discharged from Murphy General Hospital, Waltham, Mass., and was en route to duty with the 7021st Army Service Unit, at the War College.

A veteran of 22 years with the Army, he served 22 months in the Mediterranean theater during the war.

Cooking Ranks High in Arlington 'Recreation Workshop'

Shish kebab, story telling and shell jewelry took the spotlight yesterday as Arlington's first "Recreation Workshop" got under way at the Arlington Recreation Center.

Playground directors, Scout leaders and "Y" workers began picking up recreation hints they'll use this summer all over the county.

They're learning, cafeteria style, over a three-day period. Sponsors of the cooperative venture are the Campfire Girls, the YMCA, Boy and Girl Scouts and the Arlington School Recreation Department.

Yesterday morning, for example, leaders picked up some story-telling techniques from Mrs. Lois Miller of the Clarendon Branch Library.

Down the line, Mrs. Lester Kellogg, Falls Church Campfire Girls leader, demonstrated the shell jewelry, plastic key rings and felt purses she'd made and explained the operations.

In the afternoon, playground directors got some pointers on badminton from Raymond Hanken, professor of physical education at George Washington University.

As far as hungrier students were concerned, the most successful class yesterday was the demonstration of camp cookery given in the Center playground.

Hamburger, rolled in cornflakes and egg yolk, was cooking on one spit; next to it were two long skewers of shish kebab (meat and vegetables alternated).

Dean Longfellow, Boy Scout field executive for Arlington County, grilled frankfurters wrapped in bacon, and roasted a banana in the coals.

Last night, S. P. Vanderslice, an Izaak Walton League member, demonstrated fly-casting in the center auditorium.

This was part of the first of a three-day "workshop" course at the Arlington Recreation Center to give basic training to volunteer playground and church recreation leaders. The boy, dragging an express wagon, started to cross the street between parked automobiles, police said. The truck was driven by Henry Black, 47, 6207 Lee pl.

Mrs. Helen Phillips, 54, 1735 H st. nw., sustained a concussion and scalp cuts as she stepped from a streetcar loading platform on 7th st. yesterday and was struck by a taxicab.

She was walking south on the southbound loading platform near K st. Police said the cab was driven by Louis A. Bickerton, 46, 4501 44th st. nw.

Michael Allen Feld, 14, 633 Raleigh st. se., suffered a fractured right wrist and possible head injuries when struck by a streetcar at Pennsylvania ave. about 85 feet west of 7th st. se.

The boy ran across Pennsylvania ave., between two streetcars, police said.

Car, Motorcycle Collide

A motorcycle and an automobile collided at 9th st. and Missouri ave. nw. J. Hall Troupe, 27, of 21 3d st. ne., the motorcycle rider, suffered a possible right leg fracture.

Driver of the car, Donald McCafferty, 24, 916 Rittenhouse st. n. w., was charged with failure to yield right of way to a vehicle, and forfeited $25 collateral. Police said he stopped for a stop sign as he drove south on 9th st., then started up and collided with the cyclist. Troupe was taken to Emergency Hospital in a rescue squad ambulance.

Donald Wooten, 2, was slightly injured when he fell out of a taxicab operated by Bernard Stasulli, 32, 1226 Meigs st. ne., as the cab turned from 10th st. into A st. se. His mother, Mrs. Nellie Wooten, of 724 11th st. ne., took him to Casualty Hospital, where he was treated for scalp scratches.

Kendrick Due To Face Court Tomorrow

A worried bondsman had his ups and downs in Municipal Court yesterday when the name of John Kendrick, member of the old tri-State gang, was called several times with no response.

The bondsman, strapping, red-faced William J. O'Neil, had $3500 at stake, the amount posted as bond for Kendrick on charges of assault with intent to kill Tommy English of 832 10th st. nw., carrying a dangerous weapon, and two traffic violations.

O'Neil scurried through the corridors seeking his client, as police and Assistant United States Attorney John B. Diamond 3d, joined the search party.

Diamond was the most successful. He learned that Kendrick left Washington Wednesday night in the company of his attorney, James K. Hughes en route for Steubenville, Ohio, to attend a wedding.

When Diamond reached Hughes at Steubenville, he was informed that Kendrick had stopped at Pittsburgh, Pa., but was assured by Hughes that Kendrick would appear in court on Saturday. Hughes said he had understood that the case had been postponed.

As O'Neil visibly relaxed, Judge Aubrey Fennell postponed the case to Saturday.

Meanwhile, Kendrick's roommate, Jack N. Fletcher, 21, of 1407 15th st. nw., came up on an armed robbery charge. Police charged that Fletcher took $52 on June 12 from Harry and Saul Iroff, 1424 Potomac ave. se. Fletcher was held for grand jury action on $5000 bond after he waived a preliminary hearing.

Park Group Is Seeking $95,000 for Slum Plans

Funds Are Needed For Survey in 20-Million-Dollar Clearance Program

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission is going to bat for the $95,000 it needs to start work on Washington's 10-year slum clearance and redevelopment program.

Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant 3d, chairman, said yesterday that a request from the commission is on the way to the Senate asking that the sum be written into the Independent Offices appropriation bill. The House failed to include the sum when it passed the bill Wednesday.

The $95,000 has been earmarked by the commission to set up plans for the program and to conduct a survey to determine areas most in need of redevelopment.

To Cost 20 Million

Actual cost of the program will be 20 million dollars.

Grant also said that the commission will seek reinstatement in the bill of $1,500,000 for purchase of park lands in nearby Maryland.

The commission, through its land purchasing agent, Norman C. Brown, announced it has acquired an acre of land at Bladensburg rd. and Eastern ave. ne. for its controversial Fort Drive project. Brown said it was acquired through condemnation proceedings from Jimmy La Fontaine for $52,750. Fontaine is well known in Washington gambling circles.

Also through condemnation the commission has acquired two pieces of land to extend the Glover-Archbold Park in the vicinity of Massachusetts ave.

Brown said the condemnation jury decided $95,000 a fair price for a strip of land flanking the valley of Foundry Branch just north of Massachusetts ave. The second award was $23,750 for grounds of the Washington City Orphanage, immediately to the northwest. The two strips total approximately 2 acres.

Glover-Archbold Park thus extends now from the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal to Upton st. nw., through the valley of Foundry Branch.

State Dept. Work Approved

The commission also announced yesterday it had approved:

Plans for an addition to the new State Department building at 21st st. and Virginia ave. nw.

A bill to locate a First Division World War II memorial in the vicinity of the World War I memorial south of the old State Department building.

The Citizens Council for Community Planning made strong protests to members of the House of Representatives yesterday in a last-minute effort to have the $95,000 appropriation for the National Capital Park and Planning Commission written in the Independent Offices bill.

U. S. Awarded Title to Long Disputed Land

The Federal Government yesterday won title to half a city block in a 27-year-old court case during which three principals died and court records were once lost.

Justice Matthew F. McGuire of District Court awarded the Government the disputed property, eight lots on the block between 23d and 24th and B and C sts. ne. It is now part of the Anacostia Park area.

The basis of the dispute was who owns land under the high-water mark of the Anacostia River. In 1794, the Government sold river front property to private citizens. It didn't say who owned the land under the river, and didn't make provision for land developed when the river receded.

In 1920, the Government condemned the land in question. The owners said they were not compensated for that portion which had once been under the river but had since come out of it because of river recession or artificial fills.

Suit was brought in District Court. The referee hearing the case died. All pleadings in the case were lost. The justice hearing a newly filed case died. The Government attorney died.

They then began all over again.

Justice McGuire ruled that the Government could have conveyed the flats-in-dispute to private owners but it never did so, and the citizens had no case.

The Government was represented by Attorney Robert R. MacLeod.

Maryland Hits Back On Auto Tag Decision

The same to you, said the Maryland Commissioner of Motor Vehicles yesterday to the District of Columbia, announcing that District motorists whose cars remain in the Free State 90 days a year must also buy Maryland tags.

On Tuesday, District Traffic Director George Keneipp told a Baltimore man that since he kept his car here three days a week he must purchase District plates as well as Maryland ones.

Yesterday, W. Lee Elgin, the Maryland Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, retorted with a similar edict. Before the District laid down its directive, however, the Commissioner had shown a more conciliatory attitude.

At a recent conference of motor vehicle commissioners, he had suggested that such motorists be required to register with only one State, but this suggestion is probably destined for history only now.

Under the Maryland-District reciprocity relationship, a motorist whose car remains in the other's territory more than 90 days a year must purchase plates from both. The Virginia-District agreement requires motorsits whose cars remain more than four nights a week in the other's territory to purchase two sets of tags.

Tax Extension Granted

Alexandria taxpayers will have until July 15 to pay their first-half property taxes, Commissioner of Revenue Aubrey C. Callahan said yesterday. He said that in the turmoil of moving his office from one part of City Hall to another the tax notices were a month late going out.

Bees Give Him Trouble

S. H. Morgan, 414 E. Howell ave., Alexandria, says he's had bee trouble for two years. His neighbor keeps 18 hives of them just across the fence from the Morgan back yard.

Morgan said that he and his family have been getting stung regularly. Once, he said, the bees swarmed on one of his trees in such numbers that they broke off a limb two inches thick. It takes his wife all day to put out the washing, what with eluding wandering bees.

Yesterday he brought suit in Civil Court to get the bees out of his life. Judge James R. Duncan listened to Morgan's story and to beekeeper W. C. Thorne's plea that his, harmless bees were his only means of support. With the honey season approaching, the judge continued the case to next week and ordered that in the meantime new sites be considered.

Hospital Fund Grows

The Children's Hospital building fund was bolstered yesterday by a fresh intake of 755 coupon authorizations, mailed to the Potomac Electric Power Co. by District residents.

All told, 3649 refund okays have been received to date. Should all participants donate the $3.50 maximum Pepco refund, the hospital's fund will be increased by more than $13,000.

Under the plan, Pepco consumers who are entitled to refunds donate the money to the hospital fund. No cash changes hands; the company merely deducts the money from bills consumers receive in July and August.

Sailors Get Rough

Two men were injured, one seriously, early yesterday when two unidentified sailor guests got rough with the host's firetongs.

Suffering head cuts was William O. Brenning, 24, of 3732 P st. nw., the party host. His friend, Vincent Gilmore, 30, of 4000 Cathedral ave. nw., suffered lacerations of the head. The two told police they were assaulted by the sailors, who departed after the fracas.

Thief Takes Girdle

Alexandria police were stuck with the delicate job yesterday of locating a stolen girdle. R. M. Foote, 105 W. Howell ave., told police that a package containing that garment was taken from his parked car sometime Wednesday evening. He said he didn't know its value.

Marine League Meets

The newly formed Arlington Detachment of the Marine Corps League held its second meeting last night in the Radio Building, 2030 N. 16th st., Arlington.

Newly elected officers presided. They were H. A. Watts of 2713 S. Glebe rd., commandant; Staff Sergt. Richard W. Moon, jr., USMC, senior vice commandant; Technical Sergt. William M. The group will hold regular meetings on the first and third Thursdays of each month. All active and discharged marines are invited to attend.

River Dragged for Woman

Harbor Police yesterday unsuccessfully dragged the Potomac River below Memorial Bridge for the body of an unidentified woman who reportedly leaped from the bridge at 2:10 a. m.

Alexander L. Payne, jr., taxicab operator, of 637 Q st. nw., reported to police his woman passenger jumped from his moving cab on the bridge and plunged headlong over the rail. He said, the young woman told him her husband was killed in action in Italy, 1944, with the Ninety-second Division, and added that she could start life all over again if she could find the "right man."

Play Center Ready

A 10½-acre tract to be developed as a recreational center at Wood Acres will be dedicated tomorrow at 2 p. m. Brooke Johns, president of the Montgomery County Commissioners, and Col. E. Brooke Lee, vice chairman of the Maryland Park and Planning Commission, will speak.

The program will open with a baseball game between the McKinney Wildcats and the Fairbanks Tigers, neighborhood teams, followed by a drawing for door prizes and speeches by the county officials. A roast beef dinner will be served at 6 p. m. If it rains, the dinner and drawing will be held in the Glen Echo Firehouse, the Wood Acres Citizens Association announced yesterday.

Quiet Reminder

Only 14 shopping days until the Fourth of July. But not for firecrackers, roman candles, bombs or other fireworks for use in the District, please.

It is against the police regulations to sell, deliver, discharge or set off devices containing powder or other explosives in the District, Washington police reminded the public last night.

Other officers elected were: vice president, Mrs. Irvin Hufford; recording secretary, Mrs. Robert Brown; treasurer, Mrs. Arthur King; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Nelson Gray; parliamentarian, Mrs. J. Virgil Gaines.

Judge's Blast Heeded

There was marked improvement in Judge Arthur P. Owens' police court in Hyattsville yesterday when less than one fourth of the scheduled cases were continued to a future date.

The jurist blasted dilatory tactics of Prince Georges County attorneys at Monday's session when only two cases were actually tried. That day 25 continuances were issued in a docket of 41. Yesterday only 12 out of 53 were deferred for furture hearing.

Hearing Ban Sought

An application for a writ to prohibit judges of Arlington County Court from holding further hearings in an eviction case is being considered by Circuit Court Judge Walter T. McCarthy.

The unusual application was made by Lester R. Conley, attorney for Mr. and Mrs. Morgan D. Roderick who have sued to evict a tenant from the home they own at 501 S. Wayne st., Arlington. The application followed a court decision in favor of the Rodericks, who now want to end other court hearings in the case.

Fined $275 on 5 Counts

Sergt. Lawrence E. Coates, 26, a Fort George G. Meade soldier living at 2719 11th st. nw., was fined $275 on five traffic counts in Hyattsville Police Court yesterday.

Coates, who was apprehended by Maryland State Police near College Park after eluding Metropolitan and Hyattsville police during a 15-mile chase from Northeast Washington on June 5, denied any knowledge that the police were chasing him.

Judge Arthur P. Owens assessed fines of $100 for turning off lights to avoid identification, $125 for exceeding 70 miles an hour, $25 for failure to obey an officer's command, $15 for failure to stop at three stop signs and $10 for reckless driving by zig-zagging.

He told Coates that he was making the fines light in view of his service record. A sixth charge of having no driver's permit was dismissed.

Writing to three United States Senators now investigating the Kansas City vote fraud case, Green asked: "Why confine the investigation . . . exclusively to the congressional district in Kansas City?"

Jap School Pupils Sending D. C. Zoo Five Salamanders

The reptile house at the National Zoological Zoo will take in five new boarders early next week. Their names are megalobatrachus japonicus, but they are commonly known as giant salamanders.

The salamanders left Tokyo by air yesterday as a gift by Japanese school children to America. They are descendants of an amphibious family which overran the earth in prehistoric days, but which now is restricted to eastern Asia mountain streams.

Several years ago the local Zoo had three specimens, but they died after seven years of exhibiting their charms. At present there are none in America, according to officials at the Zoo.

At Sligo Church

Adventists Open Camp Conference

About 3000 Seventh-Day Adventists from 50 District area churches met last night in Sligo Church, Takoma Park, Md., for opening of the denomination's annual camp meeting of the Potomac Conference.

Elder H. J. Detwiler of Takoma Park, president of the conference, spoke on "The Return of Jesus—the Only Hope of an Anguished World."

Supporting the Adventists' belief in the Second Coming of Christ, Elder Detwiler said: "The great prophecies of the Bible are accompanied by divine interpretations so that they may be understood. The Second Coming of Christ is set forth in the Bible as a glorious, impending event to take place in our day." It is a fundamental doctrine of Christian faith and not a dream of ignorant fanatics, nor a creation of spectacular theologians. It is a truth divinely revealed and recorded in the Bible with marked clearness, emphasis and prominence."

Eighty family tents have been pitched on the campus of the Washington Missionary College to accommodate the overflow. Both dormitories at the college also are being used to house the campers as well as rooms in private homes.

Tonight's mass meeting at 8 o'clock will be highlighted by a talk on "Calendar Reform" by Carlyle B. Haynes, chairman of the denomination's American Religious Liberty Association Committee on Calendar Revision.

The calendar rally is open to the general public as is every meeting, continuing through Sunday, June 29.

Prices Show Slight Drop

Retail prices for goods and services used by moderate income families in Washington dropped 0.2 per cent during the month ending May 15, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, United States Department of Labor.

All major groups of items in the family budget went down in price except for clothing, which remained the same, and miscellaneous costs, which went up 1 per cent.

The decrease was the first shown by the index since February. It brought the retail price average to 154.5 on the index, based on the figure 100 which represents the average cost of goods and services between 1935 and 1939.

The retail price average was 17.6 per cent higher in mid-May than it was in May, 1946, and 56.7 per cent above the prewar level of August, 1939.

Greatest price decrease in the family budget was in the fuel, electricity and ice group, 2.4 per cent.

Bill Would Give Railroad Title To D. C. Tract

Pennsylvania Railroad will be given title to 1200 block E st. sw., for a cash settlement, under terms of a bill approved yesterday by a Senate District Subcommittee. The sale must be approved by the U. S. Attorney General.

The street bed, containing 30,622 square feet, has been used for tracks by the railroad for many years under special legislation. Now the railroad wants to buy the title in order to sell about one fourth of the street area to a wholesale food company as site of a warehouse.

Only way the District is affected, officials testified, is that more taxes will come into the city treasury. The bill already has been approved by the House.

Program of Mental Hygiene For Normal Children Planned

Tentative plans for a mental hygiene program for normal children were discussed by Dr. Henry H. Lichtenberg, chief of pediatrics for Group Health Association, Inc., at a meeting of members last night in the National Archives auditorium.

The program would be in addition to services already offered by the organization, the growth and current services of which were described at the meeting by Melvin L. Dollar, executive director of the association.

The mental hygiene program would be in the form of a consultation service with trained psychiatric personnel, to which mothers and children among the membership would be referred for assistance.

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passage with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Outdoor Drinking Planned for Elks Draws Protests

Sipping from frosty glasses in a cool garden may be a pleasant summer evening's pastime for lodge members, but it would be a "noisy nuisance" to folks in the neighborhood.

That's what 11 neighbors of the Columbia Elks Lodge, No. 85, 301 Rhode Island ave. nw., told the alcoholic beverage control board yesterday when the lodge sought ABC permission to serve drinks in a garden adjoining the clubhouse.

A written protest was also sent in by 26 neighborhood residents.

Herbert Edward Jones, former exhalted ruler and now president of the lodge's trustee board, said the neighbors were only guessing about an undetermined condition and that the lodge would prove the garden wasn't a nuisance if given a chance. ABC took the case under advisement.

Council Will Make Survey Of Hospital, Health Facilities

Plans for a survey of Washingtons hospital and health facilities and needs, as a first step in obtaining Federal aid in a construction program, were made yesterday at a meeting of the Hospital Advisory Council in the D. C. Department of Health offices.

The aid is being sought under the Hospital Survey and Construction Act of 1946.

Health Officer George C. Ruhland, who presided at the meeting, said the survey would fall into three phases, a reexamination of survey already made in the District, a check as to the physical condition and adequacy of existing facilities, and a study of needs in relation to geographical incidence of cases in the District.

The survey is to begin immediately and is expected to be completed in a matter of weeks, he said.

Present at the meeting, in addition to Dr. Ruhland, were: Dr. A. R. Sweeney, superintendent of Gallinger Hospital; F. H. Kenworthy, chairman of the Health Commission, Board of Trade; Dr. Herbert Ramsey, Council of Social Agencies; Clifford Newell, president of the Citizens Association; Dr. William Herbst and Dr. A. Claggett Gray, District of Columbia Medical Society; Dr. William C. Goines, Medico-Chirurgical Society, and Dr. Jesse A. Keene, chairman, Committee on Public Health, Federation of Citizens Associations.

Death Trial Defendant Sobs on Stand

Floyd Wilson, 32, Riverdale carpenter who faces the electric chair for the slaying of Milton E. Lowe, last February 8, yesterday broke down and sobbed on the witness stand in District Court.

Wilson, father of five children, buried his face in his hands, his shoulders heaving, as he described how the "gun went off as Mr. Lowe grabbed my arm. It scared me half to death."

Lowe was killed in his car outside the Giant Food Store, 3924 Minnesota ave. ne., after he had placed $10,000 in store receipts in the vehicle. Lowe had been in the habit of picking up the receipts for a relative, the store manager.

On the stand, Wilson told how he had hoped to sell his .32-calibre revolver to get money to meet a $17 coal bill.

"I was $1100 in debt for hospital and doctors' bills," Wilson told the jury of nine men and three women. "I stopped at the Giant store with the idea I might be able to get a goods concession.

"I spoke to Lowe and he told me he was about to move the receipts. He walked out of the store with a package. I followed him into his car. Then I took out my gun and told him 'start driving'. He struck my arm and grabbed the gun and it went off . . . It seems more like a nightmare," Wilson sobbed.

Final arguments will be heard today and the case will be placed in the hands of the jury.

Dear Friend:

As an act of Christian charity, a Christian Committee has been formed in Washington to assist the United Jewish Appeal in its tremendous responsibility of raising the necessary funds to relieve the desperate plight of a million and a half homeless and destitute Jews in Europe, victims of war and pagan persecution.

This is the first time that an appeal has been made direct to the Christian community. The need is now far more urgent than ever before. UNRRA has been liquidated, without adequate steps being taken to replace its aid. Anti-Semitism in some east European countries has resulted in acts of violence against Jews which has led to a panic flight westward to D. P. Camps. President Truman's suggestion that 100,000 Displaced Persons be permitted to emigrate to Palestine has met no response. Higher costs have magnified the burden of relief activity in many areas abroad. All these factors have greatly increased the amount of money needed to lighten the suffering.

The interest in the Washington Christian Committee has been most gratifying, and it is hoped that the sum of $200,000 as the Christian contribution to the Appeal in this area will be raised this week.

An important phase of this drive is the appeal to Christian Church members to contribute $1.00 each through their churches, or directly to the Christian Committee. Sunday, June 22 is the date for the appeal.

We earnestly hope that our Christian people will do their part in helping to relieve these tragic needs.

Sincerely,

Arthur S. Flemming, President

Frederick E. Reissig, Executive Secretary

'Duel in the Sun' Is Debasing, Rankin Says

Representative John Rankin thinks there is too much drool in "Duel in the Sun." To be specific, he considers the supercolossal Western to be "filthy, debasing, and insulting to moral instincts of decent humanity."

The Mississippi Democrat expressed his criticism in a resolution calling on the District police "to either close the Palace Theater or prevent further showing of this vicious film . . . in any . . . theater in the District."

Rankin did not disclose whether or not he had personally seen the picture, but said he had received numerous complaints from over the country against it.

During a flurry of debate over the resolution, Representative Donald L. O'Toole (D., N. Y.) commented drily that Rankin's attack on the movie would give it one million dollar's worth of free publicity. The producer, David O. Selznick, spent six million dollars to make the Technicolor film, and spent two milion dollarz more to publicize it.

Richard Coe, The Post's drama critic, in reviewing the film several weeks ago, said it was mildly entertaining, but that he objected to it because it lacked good taste. However, Coe pointed out, the film was approved by the Motion Picture Association of America, Hollywood's self-censorship agency.

Anyhow, the question of banning "Duel in the Sun" here is for the time being an academic question. The film ended a four-week run at the Palace Wednesday night.

A TIDAL WAVE OF RHYTHM will roll over the Neptune Room tomorrow when Sammy Ferro and his Tidesmen will set off a chain of reaction in music. There's something aptly nautical in Sammy coming to Neptune. He was leader of the Navy band aboard the U. S. S. Saratoga during the war . . . As a unit the Tidesmen look like a slice of perfection. Sammy's almost a one-man band by himself, does exciting things to the trombone, vibes, drums and bass. Accordionist-arranger Dick Bailey is one of the finest melody men in town. Aces, too, are bassist Joe Lane and pianist Stanley Mayer.

Al Shea's popular and perky dance music crew opened last night at the China Clipper. Al leads from the guitar, is supported by organist Carl Parker and pianist-accordionist-celestist Stan Jones. It's an unusual and pleasing group.

STRICKLAND BRANCHES OUT. Bill Strickland, long known as a band leader and booker, is now also a summer resort operator. With Redge Fowell, owner of the Orchid Flower Shop, he's taken over Cedar Point. Among the attractions are dining at Duck Inn, dancing to Wally Taylor's music, bathing, picnicking and fishing. A 2200-foot landing field will take care of air arrivals. Boats for hire include cabin cruisers, speed boats, canoes with outboard motors and plain rowboats for the leisurely minded . . . Veterans' organizations and their auxiliaries will be Cedar Point's honor guests this weekend.

REALLY REFRESHING are Merry-Land's new Cliff Conrad and Jimmy Kingsley, both singing pianists. Cliff, dark and zippy, is a finished performer with a theater singing technic, can reel off any musical comedy number you can mention. Redheaded Jimmy is more on the crooning side, but plenty effective. They alternate at the piano without a minute lost between numbers. Owner Olivia Davis is so pleased with the lads that she's putting them on an afternoon cocktail hour (all drinks 45 cents). Their evening sessions begin at 8:30.

Smart young folks are traipsing out to the Washington Aviation Country Club now that Bob Seidell's band is there every day in the week but Monday. The WAAC is a really beautiful spot, a couple of miles this side of the Congressional Country Club.

CASINO ROYAL BULLETINS. Harry Green's ventriloquial satire on a mind reading act rates special praise for originality . . . Major Domo Jack Liang, back from 15 days in Canada, is still provoked because it rained every day. His vacation was all wet . . . Louise Lee is out with an ailing larynx. Belle Adams has taken over her song chores . . . the closer you sit to those Elaine Shaffer Girls, the prettier they look . . . new show coming up at the Casino R. next Tuesday.

DREAM DINNERS. Lobster Cantonese at Ruby Foo's—unbelievably luscious. Delicate Chinese tea later; also those diverting "fortune cakes" . . . Beef simmered in red wine a la Bourguignonne at the Dubonnet Room. On the side a mixed green salad with chiffonade dressing . . . Bor Lor Gai Pen (that's pineapple with white meat chicken) at the Good Earth. We'd precede this with a bit of barbecued pork, wind up with a couple of the Good Earth's super-tender almond cakes . . . Veal scallopini (heavenly) at Ciro's. Then a coupe Armanda of vanilla ice cream, fruits and creme de menthe. Then a pony of that French peach brandy recently added to Ciro's cellars . . . Vine leaves stuffed with rice and lamb kapama at the New Athens. Topped off with either baklava or galatoboureko, both delicious Grecian pastries.

Disc Jockey Jerry Strong, WEAM's morning wake-up man, is thinking of hiring a wake-up man to wake up the wake-up man. On Fridays and Saturdays, that is when he makes night appearances at the Crescent, he can hardly get his eyelids apart next a. m.

PARTYING AROUND. Olmsted's never forgets the vets. They wined and dined 16 boys from Walter Reed and the Naval Hospitals on Monday. Two of Leonard Mitchell's girl friends were on hand to help entertain the veterans . . . There'll be a press party at the Carlton on Monday in compliment to Band Leader Stephen Kisley. Lois Soare, suave little publicitress for both the Carlton and Wardman Park, will be the hostess.

Woodward's Names Parker As New Head

By S. Oliver Goodman

Andrew Parker, 37-year-old grandson of one of the founders, will become president of Woodward & Lothrop on July 1.

Four other important executive changes were announced last night, following a special meeting of the board of directors. Philip M. Talbott will become vice president and general manager; A. Lothrop Luttrell will become executive vice president; J. W. Anderson will be vice president and treasurer; W. W. Everett, jr., will be assistant vice president, and D. Randall Buckingham will be secretary. The promotions become effective July 1.

Realignment of the Washington department store's official staff follows the announcement earlier this week of the retirement of W. W. Everett as president. Also, the post of vice president and general manager has been vacant since the death April 17 of George N. Everett.

Parker

Election of Parker as president continues the store's tradition of having a descendant of a founder as an executive. Parker is the grandson of the late S. Walter Woodward who helped establish the store in February, 1880. Parker, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Parker of Bethesda, Md., was born in Washington, educated at St. Albans School here and in Connecticut schools. He started work with Woodward's in 1936 and served in various departments. He is married, has three children and lives at 3000 Garrison st. nw.

Talbott, the new vice president and general manager, has served in executive capacities with Woodward's since 1914. Born in Arlington, Va., he is active in civic affairs there. He is a trustee and member of the executive committee of Arlington Hospital Association, first vice commander of Stambaugh Post, American Legion, in Falls Church. He first was employed as a salesman at Woodward's, worked his way through the ranks and was elected a director in 1934. His most recent position has been vice president and secretary.

Luttrell, new executive vice president, is a grandson of A. M.

Talbott

Littrell

Lothrop, one of the store's founders. He is 33 years old and started work at Woodward's in 1938. He was elected a director in 1942, assistant treasurer in 1945. He attended Sidwell Friends School, Princeton University, and Harvard University School of Business Administration. He is married and has one daughter.

Anderson, the new vice president and treasurer, is a veteran of 25 years with Woodward's. He has worked respectively in the controller's and merchandising offices, then in the executive offices. He became treasurer in 1942.

Announcement also was made last night that Clarence Dodge, sr., was elected to the board of directors, succeeding the late George N. Everett. All other directors were reelected.

Safe Deposit Section Elects

Miss Elizabeth H. Hall of American Security & Trust Co. last night was elected chairman of the safe deposit section of the District Bankers Association at the annual dinner meeting in Hotel Statler.

MISS HALL

In the banking field since April, 1944, Miss Hall is a member of the Woman's Committee of the American Institute of Banking and has attended classes sponsored by that organization. Born in New York, she came to Washington in 1924 and attended Sidwell Friends School, Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School and Hannah Mor Academy in Maryland. She formerly was secretary-treasurer of the safe deposit section.

Other officers chosen were Lyman E. Morris of Riggs National Bank, vice chairman; Mrs. Burdette H. Monroe of Union Trust Co., secretary-treasurer. Newly elected members of the executive council are A. S. Seipel of McLachlen Banking Corp., Mrs. Dorothy Smith of Bank of Commerce & Savings, and the three new officers.

Personnel Notes

Jeff Jaffe, former Washington architect, has been appointed assistant director of advertising for the candy and grocery divisions of the Sweets Company of America.

C. W. Travis has been placed in charge of claim work at Washington for the Standard of Detroit group. Roy Hayes, claim examiner, has been transferred from the Washington office to the home office.

Ralph A. Huie and W. Eugene Harrington have been added to the board of directors of Gordon Foods, Inc. James M. Johnston, Washington, was reelected.

William E. Jetter has been appointed director of the Washington Tax Bureau of the Research Institute of America, according to Leo M. Cherne, executive secretary of the Institute.

Nats Survive Rough 9th, Win, 3 to 2

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

THE CHAIRMAN of the board of Ro-Fel Inc., Mr. Bob Feller, who maintains a thriving radio broadcasting business, dabbles in book writing, conducts barnstorming tours and does some pitching for the Cleveland Indians, is sore at Clark Griffith.

POVICH

It's not a mere pique, but a sizable bitterness of one big operator toward another. Feller came to town to read that Griffith was blaming him for the season-long batting slump of his man, Mickey Vernon, and other players who were having a poor year. "That 30-day tour last fall with Feller's All-Stars ruined 'em," Griffith was quoted.

The Nats owner said, too, that he'd go into the next league meetings to limit barnstorming to 10 days in the future, and Feller was ruffled to the point of saying "What ails the guy, anyway?"

Griffith's attack on Feller was ill-timed, in one sense. The next night Feller put 30,701 fans into Mr. Griffith's ball park, the record crowd of the season, with thousands turned away. Feller won his game nicely, but at the finish he was still simmering.

"I'M NOT caring for myself," Feller said. "But it's a scheme to take bread and butter out of the mouths of ballplayers who aren't making as much money as I am. Our tour paid Mickey Vernon $3000 for 30 days, one third as much as Griffith paid him for the whole season. A lot of guys, besides myself, made some nice money barnstorming with me, and nobody got hurt."

Feller was striking a pose of Big Brothers to the lesser-paid ballplayers. "When I paid my taxes in a higher bracket, I didn't have much more left than some of the fellows who traveled with me, but that didn't worry me. I have food, clothing and shelter for the rest of my life, if that's what you mean by money in the bank, a nice house, a nice car and nice income.

"Most ballplayers have a short term of good income in the majors and they're unequipped to get the dough in otherwise. Barnstorming gives them a nice lift in the bank account and I get a belt out of making some money for them as well as myself. Besides, I like to keep active, and what's wrong about that?"

ANYWAY, it's absurd for Griffith to blame the Feller tour for Vernon's slump that finds him hitting 90 points under his mark of last year, Feller said. "Vernon's no .353 hitter," said Feller bluntly. "He never hit .300 in his life before last season. Griffith is panicky because of what's happening to Vernon. How about Ted Williams. He didn't barnstorm with me, and he isn't hitting .300 either."

Feller hinted that if he could choose his pitching assignments, and he probably can, he would feel no great call to appear in Mr. Griffith's ball park in the future. "He introduces this barnstorming business at a time when I don't want to think of barnstorming, and is making me the goat when I'm trying to get the Cleveland club into the World Series."

Getting into a World Series is his big remaining ambition, Feller said.

"I've pitched no-hitters, set a lot of records, made the All-Star teams and am well fixed financially. I realize that the three years I put in the Navy cost me a chance to set a lot more records, but I want to get into a world series more than anything else that might be left for me."

THEY'RE NOT GOING to limit barnstorming to 10 days, or 15, if Feller can help it. He concedes Griffith's interest in protecting his investment in his ball players and objecting to their play on unfit fields, but Feller declares in every case his barnstorming troupe played on well-kept diamonds under ideal conditions and with a trainer hired by himself.

"If the politicking in the club owners' meetings gets too tough, it may be a case for our players committee, headed by Johnny Murphy," Feller said. "We're supposed to have a voice in baseball nowadays and we're not asking for anything unreasonable."

It is written into the players' contract that they may barnstorm for 30 days, but the catch is that the permission of their own club owners and the baseball commissioner must first be obtained.

Chisox Drop Yanks From Lead, 6 to 4

New York, June 19 (AP).—The Chicago White Sox dumped the New York Yankees out of first place in the American League today by beating the New Yorkers, 6-4.

The Yanks dropped to second, 5 percentage points behind the Boston Red Sox, who were not scheduled.

Rudy York's first home run since coming to the White Sox in a trade that sent Murrell Jones to Boston, highlighted a four-run Chicago fifth-inning uprising.

Worsham Has 70, Qualifies for PGA

Lew 'Rediscovers' Himself for a 144

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Detroit, Mich., June 19.—Fashion-plate Jimmy Demaret today fashioned his second sub-par round, a neat 69, to become medalist in the twenty-ninth annual PGA championship with a 36-hole total of 137.

Although he wasn't among the leaders, Washington's National Open Champion Lew Worshaf, shot a 36-34, 70, 2 under par, to move into the select field of qualifiers with strokes to spare. Lew had a 144, even for the 36 holes.

Demaret, bedecked in canary-colored trousers, and green-gray short with shoes to match, had nine hole scores of 35-34 for a 3-under par card today over the 6907-yard Plum Hollow course.

Demaret, champion of the Bobby Jones Masters' tournament at Augusta, Ga., was seven under part for the two days of qualifying play.

The Texas-born golfing cutup needed his 69 as stoop-shouldered Clayton Heafner of Charlotte, N. C., was the hottest thing in this section today with a sizzling 65.

Big Clayt started with an eagle three on No. 1 and wound up his spectacular round with another eagle three on 18. He had 3 birdies, 2 eagles and 13 pars with nines of 32—33.

His 65, coupled with an opening 73, made him and Claude Harmon, Mamaroneck, N. Y., runners-up to Demaret with 138. Harmon, with a first-round 69, skidded a bit to 70 today as the field was whittled to 64 contestants who start eliminations with two rounds of match play tomorrow morning.

First off the tee, at 8 a. m., is Defending Champion Benny Hogan, an automatic qualifier, who did not even visit the course today.

One stroke behind the Haefner-Harmon combine at 139, was Bobby Locke, the South African invader who matched Demaret's 69 this afternoon with most of the gallery of 7000 trailing him.

Clarence Doser, Hartsdale, N. Y., veteran who led the field yesterday with 67, had 73 today and was by himself in fifth place with 140.

Sammy Snead, who lost to Worsham in a playoff for the open title, chiseled a stroke off of his first round for a 70 to deadlock Chandler Harper, Portsmouth, Va., and Jackson Bradley, Glenview, Ill., at 141.

After the 142 spot, which contained the veteran Jim Turnesa of the New York golfing family, and Jim Ferrier, former Australian champion, the field was pretty well scattered. Lloyd Mangrum, 1946 open champion, came in with a 69 for a 143 total.

The clowning Demaret had two birdies and a bogie for a 35 on the first side and birdied the last two holes for a 34 and 69 on the back nine.

His 137 brought him the Alex Smith Memorial Trophy and $250, which is pin money to the Texan, who is the year's leading money winner with more than $15,000 already pocketed.

Most prominent of the casualties today were Lawson Little, former

Wynn Beats Indians for Eighth Victory

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

The Nats went on the day shift yesterday with excellent results—a slightly squeaky but completely satisfactory 3-to-2 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

It wasn't confirmed until relief Pitcher Tom Ferrick moved onto the scene in the ninth inning and took charge of an embarrassing state of affairs inherited from Early Wynn, who put the tying run on base with none out.

Wynn took a somewhat elegant five-hit pitching job and a 3-to-1 lead into the first of the ninth, but the first man out in that inning was Wynn. Pinch-hitter Lou Boudreau rapped him for a double to left and pinch-hitter Pat Seerey ripped a single to left and the Indians had one run in with the tying run on base.

That's when Ferrick hustled from the bull pen and eased the tension for the Nats and their 4478 customers—smallest crowd of the season at Griffith Stadium. On two pitches, Ferrick lured Metkovich into popping up and Conway into flying to right field, and a bit later he shoved a third strike past Hank Edwards, and the Indians were a gone gang.

The Nats rediscovered their muscles yesterday. Four of their eight hits off Bryan Stephens and

Rivals Beware: Dyer Thinks His Cards Are 'IN'

ST. LOUIS, June 19 (AP).—Eddie Dyer, who became something of a prophet when he called the turn on the 1946 stretch drive of his world champion Cardinals, believes the revived Redbirds have a good chance to repeat.

"It is certain we very definitely are in this race," said Dyer, who gives twilight batting practice much of the credit for the Cardinals' present winning streak of seven games and for "straightening out some of the things which have held us back so far."

"While I always have had confidence in this year's team," the Redbird manager said, "I'm even more encouraged now. Without mishaps to our personnel, I feel we can overcome our handicap and win."

Pressing Leaders

That statement should provide other National League pilots with considerable food for thought with the Cardinals now only four and a half games behind the league leaders and one victory below the select .500 circle.

Its impact will be all the more forceful, too, when it is recalled that the prediction is made by the same skipper who forecast in the spring of 1946 that "if the club on July 4 is within five games of the leaders, I expect to see my team win."

How well Dyer did on his forecasting in his freshman year as a big league manager became baseball history when the Cardinals came from seven games back on July 4 to edge out Brooklyn in a pennant playoff and went on to whip the Boston Red Sox in a seven-game World Series.

Slow, But Sure

"It will be a slower, harder climb than last year but we have potentially what it takes to do it," Dyer said.

"My pitchers now are all nearing their best form. Stan Musial is beginning to hit, as are others. That last is a psychological help to the pitchers. They have more confidence when the team is producing runs."

To insure as best he can that the runs will continue being produced, Dyer has pick-up pitchers of good quality coming to the park early before night games and pitching to the pet batting weaknesses of players he thinks are most in need of a sharper eye at the plate.

And, despite a manager's crowded day, each twilight drill is conducted under Dyer's personal supervision.

DETROIT, Mich., June 19.—The bonanza that goes with winning the National Open championship has already started coming Lew Worsham's way. His sponsor, the Spalding Co., sent him a check for $2000 which matches the amount he won last Sunday when he nosed out Sammy Snead for the title. Next comes a series of exhibition matches with either Snead or Jimmy Demaret, the master's champion, as the opponent . . . The exhibitions will keep Worsham away from his new job at the Oakmont, Pa., club for several months and he is trying to work out arrangements whereby his brother, Buck, now at Mamaroneck, will help out at Oakmont temporarily . . . Out Fishing...

By JACK BELL

TODAY black bass fishing opens in Virginia and streams are now flowing high and muddy. Best bet is pond and lake fishing

Striped bass, according to reports, have shown up on the Gooses in large number. Croaker fishing so far has been a great disappointment to the bottom fishermen.

Capt. Talbot E. Bunting, Ocean City, Md., reports that a large number of Baltimoreans are fishing Ocean City waters and reaping a harvest of porgies, bluefish and weakfish. Five Baltimore fishermen trolling feather lures caught 56 blues ranging from 1 to 3½ pounds, while another party of 4 caught 40.

* * * *

MR. AND MRS. James Harding, and Mr. and Mrs. Milton Harding of Alexandria, Va., Bunting says, are making a killing and finding great sport with flounder and weakfish.

The Hardings usually spend a month at Ocean City and are considered the best flounder and weakfish fishermen among the visitors at the resort. They prefer fishing the inlet from rowboats.

The largest weakfish (sea trout) landed from the inlet thus far is a 14 pound prize winning fish.

After being entertained at a lobster feast given in honor of the Governor of Alaska, Ernest, Gruening, by Carl Moran former Congressman from Maine and now Mayor of Rockland, Me., Mr. anw Mrs. Sydney Manson, Ronald Houghton, Alexandria, Va., and John Gibson, Assistant Secretary of Labor and his wife Virginia, are most enthusiastic about the hospitality of the people of Maine, and their fishing trip to Lake Mooselucmeguntic.

The party returned Monday night and the secretary is full of tales of big ones that got away. Despite rough weather and water the party caught plenty of landlocked salmon and trout weighing up to 3 pounds.

Bogart Ties For Second; Burnett Out

By Al Costello
Post Reporter

Cutting loose with a string of six consecutive pars to go with a sensational finish that saw him birdie the seventeenth and eighteenth holes, Spencer Overton, from Baltimore's Rolling Roads Club, yesterday turned in a one over par 71 to make off with medal honors in the qualifying round of the Maryland Amateur Championship at Columbia Country Club.

The Cards:

Par—
In	445	344	344	—35—70
Overton—
Out	344	354	435	—37
In	345	344	333	—34—71
Bogart—
Out	354	435	434	—35
In	446	344	354	—37—72
Johnston—
Out	445	364	434	—36
In	345	354	344	—36—72
Wagner—
Out	345	354	435	—36
In	445	344	354	—36—72

As calmly as if he was merely practicing, the veteran who has won every amateur championship in this area at one time or another, curled a 20-foot putt into the cup on the eighteenth to nose out Eddie Johnston and Herb Wagner, two fellow Baltimoreans, and Ralph Bogart of Chevy Chase by a single stroke.

Tied with 72s, Johnston, from Country Club of Maryland, and Wagner, representing Green Spring Valley, were hanging around with Bogart ready to play off their deadlock for the tinware when Overton sunk his deciding putt with precise finality.

Shoots Par Golf

The Baltimorean's hot streak started on the twelfth hole. He was a machine in grinding out pars until the seventeenth, when he rammed a long putt into the cup for a birdie. On the 392-yard eighteenth, his drive was right down the middle and his second was a whistling shot that headed straight for the pin, stopping only 20 feet short. His hot putter didn't betray him then.

Overton was out in 37, two over par, and came home in 34, one under. Bogart carded 35-37, while the Baltimore duo of Wagner and Johnston turned in identical cards of 36-36 for their 72's.

Another Baltimorean, Bill Gehring, came next with 36-37—73. Three were tied with 74s—S. S. Fletcher of Columbia, Bobby Brownell of Chevy Chase and Eddie Meyer of Country Club of Maryland.

Scores up to and including 79 qualified for 31 of the 32 places in the field of 88.

Buddy Takes It

Five deadlocked for the 32nd place at 80—Buddy Sharkey of Indian Spring; Jay Wolf, also Indian Spring; Ray Swearingen, Columbia; John Torabene, Clifton Park and Ray Meins, of Mt. Pleasant. Sharkey eventually won in the five-way playoff with par fours on the 19th and 20th holes.

One of the biggest surprises of the day was the failure of Volney Burnett to qualify. The Indian Spring star was in trouble all day and wound up with a 42-40—82, two strokes short of getting into the elite circle.

The tricky, 6612 yard par 70 layout proved too tough for 23 in the field of 88 who failed to turn in cards.

Match play begins today at 9:30 a. m. with the winners meeting in second round matches in the afternoon. Yesterday's scores and today's match play pairings:

Nats Finally Clip Tribe, 3-2

Bob Lemon were two-baggers, and it was a two-bagger that produced each of their three important runs.

Young Eddie Yost struck the first productive blow, a double to deep left in the third that put the Nats in a 1-0 lead. Frank Mancuso opened the inning with a single to center and was forced by Wynn who took second on a wild pitch and scampered home on Yost's smash.

Stephens encountered more double trouble in the next inning when Joe Grace rapped one against the right field wall with one out. Whereupon Gerry Priddy caught the spirit of the whole thing and doubled far into left center to score Grace and move the Nats ahead, 2-0.

Wynn's wildness, apparent from the outset, finally caught up with him in the sixth when the Indians scored a lonesome run. He was in deep trouble when a single by Edwards, a walk to Fleming and Peck's safe bunt filled the bases with none out, but he held the Indians off cleverly at that point. Gordon grounded to Yost and Edwards was out at the plate. Then Wynn fanned Keltner. But he walked pinch-hitter Eddie Robinson to force a run over the plate.

In the eighth, the Nats came up with the run that finally got 'em home. Stan Spence singled to right center and Grace lashed a single to right. When Peck fumbled the ball, Grace raced to second but Spence was out at the plate in an attempt to score. Then Priddy fetched Grace in with his second double of the day to center field.

Never were the Nats more prudent with their hits. Only one of their eight blows didn't figure in the scoring. . . . Yost extricated Wynn from trouble in the second inning after a walk to Peck, a stolen base and Mancuso's wild throw put the Indians on third with one out. Yost made a one-hand pickup on Keltner's smash to thwart the Injuns at that point . . . The crowd was small, but big minded. Boudreau, who doubled to start the ninth as a pinch hitter, was given a loud hand when he left the field in favor of a pinch runner . . . It was only the second time this season that attendance fell below 5000 . . . There was disturbing news for the Nats before the game. Buddy Lewis will be out of the lineup for several days with a bruised back, suffered on Wednesday night when hit by a throw as he stole second . . . The Nats go back on the night shift immediately, with Walter Masterson opposing Jack Kramer of the Brwons tonight . . . Masterson is taking into the game a skein of 25 consecutive scoreless innings.

Harry Crouthamel limited Sunnybrook to three hits while striking out nine batters, and Mayo Pittman, slugging outfielder, slammed out three safeties including a single with the bases loaded in the ninth to score Crouthamel with the winning run.

Worsham Golf Group Meets

Presidents of all Washington golf clubs and members of a general committee will meet at the Touchdown Club tonight at 8 o'clock to work out final details of a homecoming celebration for Lew Worsham, National Open champion.

Worsham, who beat Sammy Snead for the open crown in a playoff in St. Louis last Sunday, will be honor guest along with members of his family at a dinner at the Congressional Country Club, June 26.

A motor car parade up Pennsylvania ave. and a visit at the White House to see President Truman also are on the program.

Chick Evans Out Of Wichita Golf

Wichita, Kans., June 19 (AP).—Robert (Bob) Willits, a 29-year-old Kansas City paint peddler, advanced to Friday's quarter finals, outlasting 57-year-old Charles (Chick) Evans of Chicago, 3 and 1, in the Trans-Mississippi Golf Tournament yesterday.

Ted Adams, who will meet Willits in one of the feature matches Friday, eliminated Tom Lamble of Stamford University, 4 and 3. Lamble played unsteadily all the way, while Adams made few mistakes.

Worsham Shoots a 70

United States and British open monarch; onetime Open Champion Craig Wood and Denny Shute, the only golfer to win the PGA two straight years. Shute had 151; Little, 152, and Wood, 155.

In addition to Worsham, Snead and Harper, the Mid-Atlantic area qualified Jack Isaacs, Langley Field, Va., with 75-71—146, and Walter Romans, Baltimore, with 74-71—145.

Worsham had eight one-putt greens today, five on the homecoming nine, but also three-putted twice. He three-putted the 208-yard No. 2 hole from 20 feet for a bogie four and didn't square himself with the card until the eighth hole, 514 yards long, where he was on in two and barely missed a 15-footer for an eagle three. He rammed a 30-inch putt in, however, for his birdie and got a regulation three on the ninth to turn even par 36.

Disaster almost overtook the 29-year-old Open king on the seventh hole, a 320-yard, par four test with two yawning traps guarding the green. His tee shot was 20 feet to the left of the green behind a bunker.

He chipped hole high but short and his ball struck on the bank of the trap. He pitched out beautifully, however, and dropped the 5-footer for his par.

Worsham caught fire on the back side, racking up birdie threes on 10 and 11.

He played his best shot of the day on the 235-yard par three twelfth to get a par. His tee shot landed underneath a fir tree.

Faced with a delicate shot, Worsham played out superbly, pitching to the high side of the green and allowing the ball to trickle toward the cup. It came to rest inches short of the hole and he sank it in easily.

He got another birdie on the short fourteenth by holing out a 10-footer, but took a bogey five on 15 when his second shot was trapped. He parred the next two holes, but ran into a six on the home green, three-putting from 15 feet again.

Signs For 'Thousands'

Kirk, Former Eastern Star, Signs Contract With Bosox

Walter Kirk, jr., star shortstop of the interhigh championship Eastern team of 1945, has signed a contract with the Boston Red Sox at a bonus "in the thousands," his father, Walter Kirk, sr., said yesterday.

The elder Kirk, who lives at 209 20th st. ne., reported that the 19-year-old former Marine actually signed back in September, 1946, but that the contract didn't go into effect until yesterday. Young Kirk reported yesterday to the Red Sox's farm club of Milford, Del., in the Class D Eastern Shore League.

Walter, jr., is the fourth member of the 1945 Eastern nine to sign a contract with a major league club. Outfielder Jimmy Allen, now in service, also belongs to the Red Sox. And Pitchers Paul Schaefer and Gene Collins were formerly the property of the Nats and Yankees, respectively.

According to his father, the 5-foot 9-inch, 175-pound shortstop turned down contracts from the Dodgers, Tigers and Nats to accept the "splendid offer from Scout Bill McCarren of the Boston club."

In addition to the bonus, the Red Sox have agreed to help finance the rest of Walter's education at the University of North Carolina. After being discharged from the Marines last year, Walter entered North Carolina and played on the freshman team, hitting .352 in 15 games.

He's not afraid of his batting prospects against Eastern Shore League pitching either. While stationed at Camp Lejeune, N. C., the former Eastern star played in eight games against Class D Coastal Plains League teams and clouted .628.

The Red Sox first became interested in him back in 1944 when he was playing for Eastern and for the Bunker Hill team in the Junior American Legion League. He bats and throws right-handed.

DEAR FOLKS:

Apprentice Eddie Hopkins, who galloped Assault when the star was priming for the big races, will see plenty of action for the remainder of the meeting. Stanley Greene has leased his contract to V. S. McClintock. W. G. Walker is making his riding engagements. Hopkins worked horses for three years for Tranier C. M. Feltner and was with the Bobanet Stables for a season. He rode his first winner here early this week aboard Polly's Pet. By the way, Apprentice Jimmy Baird, the current saddle sensation here, loses his "bug" and becomes a full-fledged rider on July 2. Perhaps the most optimistic race fan of the season is a woman who sat in the stands today making a pocketbook. One of the track characters passed out cigars today. He said the cat at the boarding house where he lives had kittens. George Harris claimed Big Sneeze out of the first race today. Apprentice Ken Williams arrived from Delaware Park and can do 105 pounds. People are getting Balloon conscious hereabouts. At least the 10-year-old by that name has won three in a row for Owner A. S. Moore. See you on the rail . . . BILL.

Oyster K Trails by 4 Lengths

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., June 19.—Making her first start of the year, E. A. Nicodemus' Double Duty made every post a winning one in the Snavely Purse featuring the Thursday program here.

Jockey Sammy Palumbo, putting up an energetic ride, booted the 5-year-old mare home four lengths in advance of G. Y. Booker's Oyster K with Clifford Gross' Ecobout third.

Double Duty, performing in double-quick time as far as the others were concerned, registered 1:16 4/5 for the 6 furlongs plus 120 feet. Those who backed the daughter of Sun Teddy took down an $8.80 mutuel. The crowd installed Mrs. C. P. Chenoweth's Phoness as the favorite, influenced no doubt by the appearance of Apprentice Jimmy Baird in the saddle and then stayed to see her run fourth.

Palumbo had Double Duty in front on the run to the first turn while Phoness and Oyster K were tangling with each other closest to the pace makes. Phones finally gave up and Oyster K followed Double Duty around the course. Ecobout, never far out of it, closed with good energy to be third.

Palumbo also rode the winner of the Dene Palmer Purse, the day's secondary feature. He was aboard J. N. Barnes' Miss Prime and brought the filly home with daylight to spare over the favorite, Mrs. Newell Ward, jr.'s Slam Bid. Third money went to the Art-Dale Stable's Carib Song. Miss Prime paid $6.20 and stepped the about 4½ furlongs in :50.

The daily double of $88 was a personal triumph for Jockey Webb Snyder, who is making a comeback after breaking a leg last year. In the first, he scored with Stanley Greene, jr.'s Bib Sneeze at $5.60 and then came back to get home with T. Spratt's Pole Star, paying an individual mutuel of $20.40.

Teen-Agers Disagree On Their Contemporary In Screen 'Dear Ruth'

By Richard L. Coe

BY NOW NOT ONLY every schoolboy knows, but everyone else does, too, that America's sweetheart is the teen-age girl.

Since Sally Benson wrote about her junior miss for The New Yorker, they've replaced Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn as a Nation's best-loved child characters.

Mona Freeman

"Dear Ruth" arrived on the Earle screen yesterday, a pleasantly amusing light comedy which springs from a teen-ager's exuberance. This oldster enjoyed it a lot, but we think you'd rather hear how some of your own teen-agers feel about watching a counterpart of themselves.

Here are a few quotes from teen-agers on the performance of a movie teen-ager. Off screen, Mona Freeman, the girl who plays the part, has recently become a mother, but in the film she plays Miriam, the 16-year-old who causes all the fuss.

"She's greatly exaggerated," is the way Central High's Betsy Korson puts it. Taft Junior High's Natalie D. Turpin agrees with her. "I enjoyed the picture (especially the plot) very much," says Betsy, "but I thought the kid sister a little absurd."

Loring Hickman of Kramer Junior High is on record as feeling the girl's "too young. I don't believe a 16-year-old would act like that." Central High's Ellen Seligman says "she acted more like a 14-year-old." Eastern's Raymond Bancroft agrees: "She was not like a 16-year-old girl. She seemed more like 13 or 14." Woodrow Wilson High's Nancy Lee Scrivner agrees: "More like a 12-year-old," says Nancy.

Other Teen-Agers' Talk

On the other hand, some contemporaries take another tack: "Miriam seemed to act a bit too mature for her age and did too many things wrong in such a short space of time," says Margaret Anne Beller, of Taft Junior High. And Roosevelt High's Edith Vinezky reports: "While the character of Miriam was somewhat exaggerated, I think most teen-agers will agree it is typically teen-age to be just so. I recognized many of the traits as my own."

Edith, by the way, shows signs of being an independent critic on her own. She thinks "the movie would have been improved by a little less of 'Albert'. His reaction was funny the first time, but after the fifth and sixth the picture did drag."

We're inclined to agree with Miss Vinezky about that role, the party Billy De Wolfe plays. It is hard to think that so attractive a lass as Joan Caulfield would give that stuffed shirt a serious thought—especially with Holden on the scene, isn't it?

And Here's the Plot

But that's the plot of "Dear Ruth," Edith. If Joan went right over to Bill after the first few hours of their meeting, there wouldn't be much picture left, would there? That's very bright movie criticism on your part, but that shrewd suggestion won't make you many friends among all the millions who are going to enjoy "Dear Ruth," as well as Billy.

The plot? Surely you know about the teen-ager who took to writing letters to lonely soldiers overseas and sent her sister's picture to raise their blood-pressure. That's the story of "Dear Ruth," that and how one soldier finally breaks down the sister and gets her away from the stuffy civilian she's about to marry.

For all that, there's practically a laugh in every line. Edward Arnold's temper-tried dad is a richly amusing and affectionate portrait. The veteran actor may prefer other roles, but this is one of the most facile he's ever given. Joan Caulfield is a lovely heroine and William Holden's lieutenant is likably forthright. Everyone in the cast is fun.

Much of the original play has been carried over and though the setting is wartime America, it avoids a dated air by smart pacing.

As your youngsters were agreeing, despite their remarks on the teen-ager, "Dear Ruth" is a neat, clean comedy which most everyone will enjoy.

"DEAR RUTH." Paramount release of Paul Jones production. Screenplay by Arthur Sheekman from the play by Norman Krasna. Directed by William Russell. At the Earle Theater.

Truman Again Picks Wall Street Man

By Drew Pearson

President Truman has selected another Wall Street banker and military man to be the new Assistant Secretary of State in charge of rebuilding Germany. He is Gen. Charles Saltzman, vice president and secretary of the New York Stock Exchange.

Saltzman

Because the new Undersecretary of State, Robert Lovett, is also a Wall Street banker (Brown Brothers-Harriman) and because of the various other Wall Streeters in the Truman Administration, the appointment has been received with some criticism inside the Administration.

[The State Department said yesterday that Saltzman will succeed Assistant Secretary John H. Hilldring when the latter retires on September 1. Meanwhile, he will serve as an understudy to Hilldring.—Editor's Note.]

General Marshall, however, has had a tendency to lean toward military men. General Saltzman, a West Point graduate, resigned from the Army in 1930, reentered in 1940, and rose rapidly to the rank of brigadier general. His father, Maj. Gen. Charles Saltzman, spent his life in the Army, later being appointed by Roosevelt to the old shipping board where he had an excellent record. His son, the newly selected Assistant Secretary of State, has been on leave from the New York Stock Exchange since he entered the Army.

Criticism of Wall Street appointments to the State Department is based not on anything against the individuals, who, in the case of Lovett and Saltzman are able men, but on the fact that it was Wall Street which helped build up and later arm Germany after World War I.

Two Elder Statesmen

Only two or three people know it, but Elder Statesman Herbert Hoover tried to get Elder Statesman Bernard Baruch to sign his recent letter to Senator Styles Bridges cautioning that the United States was sending Europe more of its natural resources that it could afford.

Elder Statesman No. 2, however, refused to go along with Elder Statesman No. 1.

"Why should I sign it?" Baruch told a friend afterward. "The report? Why, certainly it's good. It ought to be. Hoover stole stuff that I and General Marshall and Vandenberg and Harry Byrd had been working on for a long time.

"Hoover has become 'citizen fix-it'," Baruch continued. "He's been out of public favor so long that he's trying desperately to get back again. I'm afraid also that he's heading back toward isolation."

Exit Ku Klux Klan?

There was some eyebrow raising over the dissolution of the Ku Klux Klan at Atlanta the other day. One thing that lifted the eyebrows was the cordiality between Grand Dragon Dr. Samuel Green and Georgia's attorney general, Eugene Cook, plus the dropping of several charges against the Klan.

The original charges to dissolve the Klan were drawn up by two-fisted Dan Duke, former assistant to Cook. They included four counts against the hooded order: (1) violation of constitutional rights, (2) interference with free movement of citizens, (3) espousing bigotry and race hatred, (4) violating the "benevolent charter" of the Klan by making money on the sale of robes, hoods and paraphernalia.

Last week, however, Attorney General Cook informed Judge Bond Almond that the State of Georgia was no longer interested in the first three counts against the Klan, but solely in its alleged financial dealings. The first three charges involved criminal penalties.

This compromise was exactly what the Klan wanted. To many it added up to a whitewash. So Grand Dragon Green quickly moved for dissolution.

After the court acted, Grand Dragon Green and Prosecutor Cook put on a display of camaraderie. They shook hands tenderly. Former Prosecutor Dan Duke, 15 feet away, glowered at them.

Note—The Klan is free to reincorporate and continue business in Georgia.

Under the Dome

Certain Massachusetts Republicans are beginning a new "MacArthur for President" boom on the theory that if war with Russia is inevitable a strong military man is necessary in the White House ... Correction: Through an error, J. Cheever Cowdin was recently listed as chairman of Trans World Airlines. It should have read Transcontinental Air Transport ... Senator Taft has promised former National Labor Relations Board Member Gerard Reilly the powerful post of NLRB general counsel if the Taft-Hartley Bill becomes law. Reilly is the man who drafted the Taft-Hartley Bill, and incidentally gave the general counsel more power than the five members of the board ... Secretary of State Marshall is looking around to replace Henry Norweb as American Ambassador to Cuba.

'Sea of Grass' a Tidal Wave That Dissolves Into Ripples

By Leo Brady

"The Sea of Grass" at the Palace is a large-size, lachrymose story of a man's pride.

When it sticks to its main theme and concentrates on Spencer Tracy's set-joweled, steely-eyed stubborness, it is powerful and maturely moving. But it diffuses itself and ends up biting off just a little more than an audience can digest.

Katharine Hepburn

The character of Jim Brewton, played with unaccustomed competence by Tracy, has the proportions of a tragic figure. A cattleman in New Mexico in 1880, he is inordinately devoted to the huge expanses of land which he controls and conceives his mission of preserving the territory for grazing against farmers as a divine command.

His misdirected zeal leads him to sacrifice all values—both human and divine—to his sea of grass. That he is led to bitter gall but not made to drink is possibly the story's greatest weakness. The outlines of implicit greatness are never filled in because of an overconcern with domestic pathos and an occasional self-consciousness that an epic is in the making.

Vitiated by Sentimentality

It is possible that the faults of sentimentality which vitiate the picture's ending are attributed to Conrad Richter's original novel, from which the script was adapted. But the two-generation resolution, the protagonist's flinching at the final crisis, and the long sorrowful sequences with Katharine Hepburn thin out the full flood value of "Sea of Grass."

Katharine Hepburn is Tracy's wife, a city-bred girl unable to share his passion for pasture. This drives her to Melvin Douglas' arms at one point and the second generation mentioned above becomes mixed parentally. Miss Hepburn's slender sensitivity is appropriate here and she and Douglas, as a lawyer for the farmers, turn in the picture's best performances. Robert Walker and Phyllis Thaxter are the children of this sometimes—but not often enough—turbulent triangle and acquit themselves likably.

The film's handling of this—for Hollywood—unusual situation is delicately done—so delicately that it takes two reels of putting one and one together before it comes completely clear. Edgar Buchanan, Robert Armstrong, Ruth Nelson and Harry Carey handle other major roles.

Directed by Elia Kazan

Director Elia Kazan approached his job straightforwardly but reveals a tendency to underplay most of the emotion and his work is another factor which keeps the story's power implicit. A lengthy letter-narration stretch near the end is no help to the emotional effect of the story, for instance.

Most thrilling scenes are those which depict the cowmen and the farmers in actual combat. The most moving shot is that of a small homesteader's child wavering in a shack doorway in a high wind while Tracy's minions maul her father.

Whether you will enjoy "Sea of Grass" depends largely on whether you are willing to go a rather weary way with a magnificent attempt which only infrequently succeeds—and whether, I suppose, you are devoted to Tracy and Hepburn.

"THE SEA OF GRASS." M-G-M release of a Pandro S. Berman production. Screenplay by Marguerite Roberts and Vincent Lawrence from a novel by Conrad Richter. Directed by Elia Kazan. At the Palace Theater.

AVC Plans 'Grass Roots' Member Drive

Special Dispatch to The Post

Milwaukee, Wis., June 19.—An ambitious "grassroots" membership campaign was mapped here today by the American Veterans Committee. "Workshop" sessions were being held preliminary to its second annual convention opening tomorrow. The membership drive would place emphasis on service at community levels instead of on policy and politics.

Charles G. Bolte of New York, outgoing national chairman of AVC, explained this change at a farewell press conference when he said the largest War II veterans group "must get away from the practice of merely passing resolutions denouncing bad guys and praising good guys."

As details were spelled out at Municipal Auditorium, an estimated 1500 delegates from every State and the District of Columbia jam-packed AVC's headquarters at the Hotel Schroeder registering for the largest convention veterans of World War II have yet held anywhere. A total of 2000 delegates, alternates and guests are expected.

Fifty of them, representing the 25 chapters of the Greater Washington area council, checked in during the day led by Council Chairman Joseph Clorety of 6007 Newell Court, Silver Spring. Washington Chapter No. 1, among the largest in AVC with 1800 members, is limited this year to only 10 delegates and as many alternates by a new maximum representation rule which may cut the influence it exerted on AVC organization a year ago at the Des Moines Constitutional Convention.

Chapter members will be in the thick of it, however, because their chairman, Robert Nathan, of 2500 Q st. nw., an economist, has drafted the projected domestic platform containing such highly controversial issues as opposition to a Federal bonus, opposition to universal military training and planks dealing with labor and housing which are not radical enough to suit the extreme left-wing group within the organization.

Like the National organization, the Greater Washington area council is split on internal policy issues between the so-called liberal and left wing factions. A group not in harmony with the Nathan views is represented here by eight members of the Gorge Washington University chapter headed by Don Rothenberg, of 915 F st. sw.

The factional split will appear in differences on issues rather than in the anticipated fight over a successor to "Chuck" Bolte as national chairman largely because the left-wing lacks the delegate strength to elect a national deader, these spokesmen said.

Furious politicking is already underway for the chairmanship with two Washingtonians well out in front. They are Chat Paterson of 1725 17th st. nw., the AVC's national legislative representative, and Robert White, a lawyer, who moved from Washington to Akron, Ohio, only a fortnight ago to open a law practice there.

Paterson reportedly has the backing of Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., and Nathan, both influential as members of AVC's National Planning Committee, while outgoing Chairman Bolte is said to favor Richard Bolling of Kansas City, an organizer for the Americans for Democratic Action.

This apparent top-level split is being resolved tonight in an organization-wide caucus that may not only clarify the picture by eliminating nearly a score of "favorite son" candidates but may agree on a single organization candidate to buck the strategy of the left wing.

The leftist group is said to be pushing the candidacy of Michael Straight, young publisher of the New Republic, as a leader potentially acceptable to all elements. Elections are scheduled for Sunday morning.

The plenary convention session opens tomorrow with addresses by Gen. Omar N. Bradley, Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, and Bishop Bernard T. Shiel of Chicago.

Dance Tonight

Takoma Recreation Center, 4th and Van Buren sts. nw., will have the first of its summer outdoor dances for teenagers tonight at 8:45 on its tennis court.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Boy, Past 4, Wants No Playmate But Mother; He's Underfoot All the Time and Her Nerves Are Fagged; Tempers Flare; She Asks Help

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Last year, on my soldier husband's return, we found a spacious four-room apartment on a second floor, which seemed to us like the Promised Land after nearly three years of drifting. At last our 3-year-old son could have a regular home life.

A healthy energetic lad, he soon posed a problem by galloping through the rooms, jumping, pounding, etc.,—normal childish activities, of course, but I felt obliged to apply curbs in deference to the first floor tenants.

Also, I had to discourage him from leaning out windows, opening screens, etc., and eventually I was constantly giving negative orders and reminding him to play quietly. I encouraged clipping, painting and pasting, which amused him only briefly.

While I did my morning chores I kept him indoors with me—I thought this wise at his age—and to amuse him I had to invent imaginary games, tell stories, "play school," etc., with him virtually underfoot. Our afternoons were spent together, too, either shopping or taking the air. When children approached him to play with them, he preferred to remain with me.

He Won't Stay Out of Doors

NOW, at four and a half, he still wants to play indoors when I am busy. I've taken him downstairs and left him to play, but 10 minutes later he's back again; and though I try to be patient and understanding, I find myself snapping when he asks me to "play" or tell stories. I am treating him as somewhat of a nuisance.

With his indoor play so limited, he is constantly getting into mischief. He climbs in the windows, turns on the gas range, opens the refrigerator, tampers with the bedroom clock, etc. I let him "play store" in the pan closet and grocery cabinet, but he soon tires of this and has taken to shouting and punching when denied a request.

As a result we're constantly at war and my nerves are worn thin. My husband suggests that I let some morning chores slide and play with the boy, to compensate for his lack of companionship with other children. We want him to develop into a healthy happy individual and I am certain this constant wrangling is harmful. Please advise. G. L.

Lacks Training In Self Reliance

DEAR G. L.: A first goal in child training is to develop in him some resourcefulness in the matter of playing alone, usually during the morning, when he passes the age of morning naps.

Ordinarily this training begins in the "play pen" stage, even before he is able to walk,—when mother or nurse, though inconspicuously alert to all that goes on, gives him the impression he is alone in a safe little world of his own with a satisfying assortment of appropriate play gadgets.

He accommodates as readily to this as to his meals, bath, nap, outdoor airing, etc., if it is made an habitual part of his day's routine—say maybe for 15 minutes to start, with the period gradually lengthening as he grows older.

Where the vital social faculties of accommodation and resourcefulness are developing normally, a child of three will play alone with absorption for an hour daily—if given skill testing equipment suited to his growth level, and the comfortable knowledge that family life is flowing smoothly around and about what he's doing, yet not interfering.

Aside I might say it takes a wise, self controlled adult to "stay out" when a child is thus placidly engrossed in his own affairs. The temptation to break in, cuddle and converse is almost irresistible, when one's lamb is being so precious and unaware of it! Such impetuosity on the part of grownups spells ruination to a good play regime. Keep an eye on him, yes; but respect his solitary application. It contains the potential of great mental, artistic or inventive work—done "on one's own"—in later years.

Nursery School Advisable Here

ABOUT your son: He missed this training; and nowadays he is being a wilful nuisance to you. He invents mischief indoors because he finds it a sure-fire way to get your attention—at least temporarily—to relieve his boredom, which stems from (1) your failure on the training score and (2) his resulting ineptitude in the field of play.

For advice: Put him in a good nursery school or similar expert-supervised play group at once—daily, on a half day basis, perhaps of mornings. He needs the indirect play-education and social discipline that daily merging—whether or no—with a group his age would provide.

Also, an antidote to his shouting and punching when crossed, he needs to come up against judicious objective authority, such as the group administrator would supply to cool his head. Your alternate coaxing and wrath merely evoke alternate contempt and fury in him. Thus you need outside aid to relax mutual tension, before unbridled temper becomes a fixed response in him. M. H.

Paris Conclave Meeting Called

"It seems especially significant at this time that women leaders of France are taking the initiative in calling an International Assembly for Women's World Fellowship to determine some of the ways in which peoples of all nations can help themselves and each other to meet some of the most urgent human problms, in an over-all world rehabilitation plan such as suggested by Secretary Marshall," says Mrs Ernestine Perry of Washington, in inviting heads of national women's organizations to attend a meeting this afternoon at the United Nations' Club.

Plans for an American delegation to attend the Paris meeting will be the topic of discussion.

Mrs. Ernestine Perry has been appointed by the International Assembly Committee in France as the United States representative on the International Planning Committee. This group will meet in Paris September 28 to October 2. Honorary president of the International Assembly is Mme. Vincent Auriol, wife of the President of France. The president of the assembly is Mme. Georges Bidault, wife of the Foreign Minister.

Madame Henri Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador to the United States, will be the guest speaker at this afternoon's meeting.

Mrs. Harriman to Be Panel Speaker

Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, former Minister to Norway, and Lieut. Col. Robert B. McRae, chief, reorientation branch, Civil Affairs Division, War Department, will be the principal speakers at a meeting of the Women's Conference on International Affairs Tuesday, at the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Leaders of adult education and national women's organizations have been invited to hear discussion on the reeducation program of the peoples of our occupied areas.

Experts from the War Department will form a panel to describe the work of the American Military Government in Germany, Austria, Japan and Korea. The subjects covered and the speakers will be: schools, churches and youth activities, Dr. Leeds Gulick; films and theater, Harrison Kerr; libraries and information centers, Mrs. Olga Law Plunder; press and periodicals, David Warner.

Mrs. Harriman will talk on the responsibility of American women in this program and how they can assist our military government in the reorientation work.

An exhibit on labor conditions of the United States prepared by the Department of Labor and the War Department for use in Germany will be on display. Mrs. Helen Montfort Moodie is chairman of the Women's Conference on International Affairs.

Ask Anne — Your Questions on Homemaking

I refinished a rosewood steeple clock using linseed oil to finish. Apparently I applied too much oil or applied it too often as dust seems to have settled into the oil, leaving it sticky and dirty looking. Should I wash it? Please give me your advice. B. W. F.

Wash the wood surfaces of your clock by wringing a soft cloth out of warm lukewarm suds. Do not add too much soap. Wash and dry only a small area at a time. When thoroughly dry, polish with a good furniture polish or wax. Put on only a little wax and polish vigorously.

I'd like your suggestions as to removing grease stains from a recently purchased fed leatherette dinette chair. How will I keep the gloss on the chair after the stains are removed? R. N. K.

Make a paste by mixing cornstarch with carbon tetrachloride and spread over the spot. When dry brush off. Repeat if necessary. The solvent does not spread and is less likely to form a ring if used in this way. When the spot is removed, go over the leather with a good leather dressing.

Can you tell me how to lighten a Panama straw hat which has become yellow? A. L. S.

Take it to a valet service which specializes in hat renovation. They may be able to bleach it for you.

Some mineral oil was spilled on my wool reversible rug and has left a large brown stain. How can I remove it? E. O.

Sponge the spot with carbon tetrachloride. Or mix carbon tetrachloride with cleaning powder. Work this into the spot and let stand 30 minutes and brush off. If this doesn't remove the stain, the spot will require professional treatment.

I have two blue rayon satin covered down comforters. Are they subject to moth infestation? What is the best way of treating and storing them for the summer? My furniture is limed oak with apparently no other finish. Should it be waxed or polished to stay in good condition? How can I wash or clean waterproof shower and window curtains? How can grease spots on nonwashable wallpaper be removed? If no vacuum cleaner is available, how can upholstered furniture and mattresses be kept dust free? How can upholstered furniture be cleaned at home? B. R.

Down comforters are subject to moth infestation. Be sure that they are well cleaned and aired before placing them into a mothproof paper bag or box together with moth crystals or balls.

Yes, apply a good light-colored wax or furniture polish three or four times a year to keep your limed oak furniture in good condition. Polish vigorously after each application. Between applications of polish, rub well with a soft lintless cloth.

Spread your shower curtains on a flat surface and wipe with a damp cloth or sponge. Mild soap suds may be used on especially soiled spots. Rinse off with clear lukewarm water, sparingly applied. Hang on shower curtain hooks to dry. If fabric has been creased or wrinkled, cover with a pressing cloth and use a warm, not hot, iron for pressing.

Moisten a rug cleaning powder with carbon tetrachloride and spread the paste on the spotted wallpaper. Allow it to remain until dry. Remove it with a clean soft cloth. Repeat if the spot is not all removed the first time.

Upholstered furniture and mattresses can be cleaned at home by a good brushing. Once or twice a year it would be helpful to take them onto a porch or out of doors where a more thorough job of brushing can be done. Slip covers and mattress covers would be a big help in keeping them dust free.

Use a good upholstery cleaner and follow the directions on the package to clean the upholstery at home.

Since unpacking a white straw hat I bought last summer I have noticed it has turned slightly yellow. It is not a cheap hat. The cleaners won't attempt to clean it. How may I do it at home? J. M.

A valet service which specializes in hat renovation might be able to bleach your hat for you to restore it's original whiteness. This is a job for professionals.

Would you please tell me where I should place a silent butler? A. DIT.

I have heard the term silent butler used for a dumb waiter, a utensil to empty ash trays into and a serving table with or without wheels on it. Since you ask where a silent butler should be placed, I infer you are using the term to describe a cart or table from which to serve food in the dining room in the absence of a maid. This piece of equipment should be placed at the right of the hostess within her reach as she is seated at her place at the table. If there is a second serving table or cart this could be placed at the host's right.

I am interested in making Marzipan, but I don't know where to buy almond paste or rosewater. Can you tell me where or in what kind of a store I would go to get either or both of these? Also, how can I clean my baby's crib? It is white enameled. When I use soap and water the paint comes off. H. W. T.

I am told that almond paste is available in Washington only in wholesale lots—that is in five pound cans. This quantity can be purchased through a wholesale grocer in Georgetown. For smaller amounts, I suggest you contact a commercial baker who uses it and he might be willing to sell you a smaller amount. Rosewater will be found at most drug stores.

If the paint comes off your baby's crib when washed, the only way to restore it is to repaint it. Sand off all the loose paint and remove the dust with a soft lintless cloth before you repaint it.

Delightful dish for a warm evening is this enticing bowl of Mocha Punch. It's made by combining chilled coffee with whipped cream and chocolate ice cream

This is National Dairy Month

Now's the Time to Whip Up Cooling Supper Dishes

By Lucia Brown

WITH the meadows lush and green throughout Virginia and Maryland, the Washington area is in a fine position to celebrate National dairy month this June. The cows are knee-deep in clover and milk production is high. Whipping cream and butter—on the shortage list not so long ago—are plentiful now, as well as other dairy products.

One way to observe dairy month around your own family board is with delicious dairy desserts. There are many to choose from, but here are two that are just a little different. They're macaroon strawberry whip and buttermilk pie. Yes, that's right—buttermilk pie.

The strawberry whip can be made with either fresh or frozen strawberries. It only takes a cupful of berries to make enough dessert to serve eight people. Combined with rich, smooth cream and crunchy macaroons they make a tempting and satisfying dish. Here's the recipe:

Macaroon Strawberry Whip

Beat one egg white until it's very stiff. Blend in two tablespoons of sugar and one cup of strawberries. If the berries are frozen, be sure to thaw them out before mixing with the other ingredients. If they're fresh, cut the berries in half, sprinkle with a little sugar, and let them stand a few minutes before using. Whip a half cup of heavy cream and crumble up enough coconut macaroons to fill three cups. Fold the whipped cream and macaroons into the strawberry and egg white mixture. Pour into the refrigerator tray and freeze.

Buttermilk Pie

Combine one cup of sugar with three tablespoons of flour and a half teaspoon of salt. Blend them thoroughly together. Beat three egg yolks slightly and add to them two cups of buttermilk and four tablespoons of butter that has been melted and then cooled. Add the liquid gradually to the dry ingredients, blending well. Then fold in the stiffly beaten whites of three eggs.

Line a deep nine-inch pie pan with pie dough, crimping the edges. Pour the buttermilk mixture into the pie shell and bake in an oven of about 375 degrees F. for 45 minutes. Test by inserting a silver knife into the center of the pie. If it comes out clean, the pie is done. This recipe will serve six.

Evening Treat

Another dairy delicacy is Mocha Punch, especially good for serving if friends drop in unexpectedly on a warm evening. If you have the proper ingredients on hand, the mixing can be left until the last minute. It's made by combining chilled coffee, chocolate ice cream, and whipped cream.

For mixing and serving the punch, use any large bowl you may have. Be sure the bowl is cold before pouring in the ingredients. To serve 12, you'll need a quart of chilled coffee. To it add a pint of chocolate ice cream and a few grains of salt. Stir until the ice cream is partly melted. Whip a half pint of whipping cream until its stiff and add a half teaspoon of almond flavoring. Fold the whipped cream into the other mixture in the punch bowl. In the center, place large scoops of chocolate ice cream. You'll need about a pint of ice cream for the center of the bowl. Sprinkle nutmeg lightly over the top and serve immediately with a side dish of cookies.

OUR NATS

Frank T. Lyman of 4930 Del Ray ave., Bethesda, Md., is very much impressed with the vote of confidence recently given the Washington Senators by the Bethesda Cub Scouts.

Frank says it will help the Nats' pull themselves out of their slump to know that the fans are solidly behind them, and he suggests other groups ought to join the movement.

A good idea—and filling up the holes in the Senators' bats wouldn't hurt, either.

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

John W. Willis of 1728 Massachusetts ave. nw. cites one more reason why radio has grown to be such a mighty social force. He heard this one at 5 p. m., June 16:

In the wake of our recent wave of bicycle thefts comes a suggestion from Mrs. L. E. Wedding of 3813 17th st. ne. She writes:

"While in Florida last fall I noticed that all the bikes carried license tags, just as the autos do. This might be a good idea for the District—both as a safeguard against theft and a means of raising additional revenue."

ABOUT CAVE DWELLING

Mrs. Helen Duey Hoffman knows I was only kidding when I wrote that "Silence" item about Hugh Guidi's morning wake-up program. But she adds some serious thoughts about being a good neighbor.

"Most of us," she writes, "live in apartments or row houses, and when we turn on our radios full blast the sound is sure to leak into somebody else's place.

"For example, I live in an apartment which has ventilating doors. They're very convenient in hot weather—but they're one more reason for keeping noise to a minimum during the very early and very late hours.

"I usually turn on my radio at 6:30 a. m., but when the boogie woogie starts to blare, I've got to make a mad dash for the knob to turn it down.

"Tell Mr. Guidi to play sweet stuff in the morning, and he'll make it easier for his listeners to live in peace with their neighbors."

The Bridge Deck

By Florence Osborn

Today's declarer needed no help from North to bid four hearts, but he required help from the defense to bring home his four-heart contract, doubled. The hand was played at the world masters' individual championship by Dr. R. H. Ecker, jr., a former winner of the event. His partner was Jack Cushing, runner-up this year.

West opened the jack of clubs, and East overtook with the ace and returned the spade 10. Declarer went up with the ace, realizing East was looking for a spade ruff, and led a low heart toward the board, hoping that West would fail to take the ace and return a spade. West was worried on this play, fearing he might catch his partner's long king, as a contributor did a few days ago, and he ducked, dummy's nine winning.

Dr. Ecker returned a heart to the king, and West took the ace of hearts and the king of spades, but that was all. Declarer won the remaining tricks for four hearts, doubled, losing a club, a heart and a spade.

West could have set the had by jumping up with the heart ace, cashing the spade king and giving East a spade ruff. Declarer would have lost a club, a heart, a spade and a spade ruff, for down one.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES

THINK QUICKLY, MY FRIEND— THE FLAMES MAY REACH THE FUEL TANKS AT ANY MOMENT... YOUR FAT MASTER LOST NO TIME IN REMOVING HIMSELF FROM DANGER... WHY SHOULD YOU RISK DEATH?
THAT IS TRUE...
WHEW! IT WORKED. THERE HE GOES. THEY DIDN'T REALIZE THE FIXED EXTINGUISHER SYSTEM WAS KEEPING THE FIRE DOWN, AND THIS HAND JOB IS FINISHING IT.
THERE! IT'S OUT AND I'D BETTER BLOW BEFORE THEY FIND OUT THE BIG FIRE SCENE'S OVER... WONDER WHAT HAPPENED TO THE PEA-SHOOTERS WHO STARTED THIS RAT RACE?
LOOK WELL, COMRADES, THE WANTED TRANSPORT LANDED BETWEEN TWO EVEN ROWS OF FIRES. WE ARE GOING DOWN TO INVESTIGATE.

I SUPPOSE YOUR GERMAN IS AS RUSTY AS AN OLD HINGE, BOSS LADY—BUT CAN YOU CALL BACK ENOUGH FROM BOARDING SCHOOL DAYS TO CRACK THIS FOR CUPCAKE?
OF COURSE! —LET ME SEE IT!— DOCTOR MENDER IS PROBABLY TELLING US WHEN HE'LL ARRIVE FOR THE OPERATION!
HMM!— I'M SORRY TO BE THE ONE TO BREAK UNWELCOME NEWS TO THE POOR CHILD!

Getting mad

Among the useless things in life . . . Is that of getting mad . . . And usually it only serves . . . To make us somewhat sad . . . No matter what may bother us . . . Or make us want to frown . . . We ought to do our level best . . . To keep our temper down . . . For there is nothing to be gained . . By giving in to wrath . . . Except the lonely feeling of . . . A bitter aftermath . . . A fit of anger indicates . . . We cannot get along . . . And have no real ability . . . To remedy a wrong . . . We never should get mad but if . . . We have to gripe and groan . . . It ought to be exclusively . . . When we are all alone.
